Supreme Court May Rule Today On Fate of NRA

Administration's Bill for 2-Year Extension Up in House.

Action in Senate Due Wednesday

Blue Eagle Office Goes Ahead With Revising Codes and Set-up.

By Felix Bruner.

NRA will reach the showdown stage this week.

Congress will attempt to decide whether the Recovery Administration is to continue for two years, as the President has requested, whether it shall be continued for only a short time, which its friends contend is the equivalent of slow death—or whether it will be killed outright.

Even more important, perhaps, than the action of Congress will be the decision of the nine members of the Supreme Court, who may rule today on whether the recovery program conforms with the provisions of the Constitution. Only two more rule days remain in the present session of the court, today and next Monday, and it was considered an even chance that the NRA ruling would come today.

Friends and foes of the NRA were hoping alike that the court would decide to act today. If it does not, there will be a week of argument in Congress, argument that may prove to be a sham battle. Whatever Congress does this week may be changed completely by the ruling if it comes next Monday. If it comes today, congressional leaders would have an opportunity to rewrite legislation to conform.

Clear Track in House.

NRA will have a clear track ahead in the House. The new bill, calling for a two-year or a 21½-month extension, will be reported by the Ways and Means Committee today. The final draft, which is expected to contain only a few concessions to the Senate's demand for a brief extension with rigid restrictions on NRA power, was being written yesterday.

House debate on NRA—always providing the program is not upset by a Supreme Court ruling—will be held Tuesday. With cooperation of Speaker Byrns and other Democratic leaders, this debate will be pushed to a conclusion immediately. It has been restricted to four hours. There appears to be little doubt that the House will pass the measure reported by the committee. This measure is expected to be one substantially approved by President Roosevelt and Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board.

The bill probably will go to the Senate Wednesday. Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, said he expected it to be taken up immediately. No such speedy action as that expected in the House will be taken in the Senate. With the Memorial Day holiday intervening Thursday, and with some Senators evidently in a filibustering mood, it is hardly likely that final action can be had this week.

Revision of Codes Proceeds.

Opponents of the two-year extension program in the Senate have served notice that they will not consent to sending the measure to conference. They are expected to stand firm on the nine and one-half month extension provided in the Clark resolution. Senators Clark, Borah, Nye, Bailey, King and Glass are expected to lead the opposition.

Meanwhile, at NRA headquarters plans were going ahead for the rewriting of codes under the proposed new act and for what Richberg terms the "third phase" of NRA, which will involve considerable simplification of the present set-up and a complete change in enforcement machinery. Many business concerns were marking time awaiting the outcome of the fight before making future commitments. This is particularly true in the bituminous coal industry,

PREMIER FLANDIN.

Flandin Seeks Monetary Rule In Gold Crisis

Mob at Neufchatel Raids Political Rally; Embargo Is Predicted.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 26.— The Flandin government prepared today for a political battle for its goal of a financial dictatorship as the nation's uneasiness was increased by violence in the provinces.

A mob at Neufchatel, raiding a hall where a political meeting was in progress, clashed with gendarmes, leaving several injured in the hall and in the streets.

The City of Sens was in turmoil after its newly elected mayor, Dr. Andre Dupechez, was left for dead in his ditched automobile by political enemies, with his membership card in the Nationalist veterans' organization, Croix de Feu, pinned to his lapel.

Col. de la Rocque, leader of the strong organization, issued an order to his followers not to attempt retaliation. Dr. Dupechez was reported out of danger.

Dictatorship Sought.

In Paris vigorous Premier Pierre-Etienne Flandin, recovered from recent automobile accident injuries, lined up his forces in an attempt to obtain dictatorial financial powers in the Chamber of Deputies early this week. Many observers consider the premier's move as a government fight for its life. Flandin will seek power to institute economies by decree in order to balance the budget.

The Bank of France reflected the seriousness of the financial situation by raising the discount rate for a second time yesterday, after the first increase had failed to halt the stream of gold to the United States and England. The latest hike was from 3 to 4 per cent.

Leon Blum, Socialist leader, writing an article called "Gold Panic," predicted Flandin would set an embargo on gold, leading to eventual devaluation of the franc.

Former Premier Andre Tardieu and other politicians left their country homes for Paris as Flandin had week-end talks with President

Brush Fires Cloud Quintuplets' Home

Flames Fail to Deter Many Sightseers, However.

By the United Press.

Callander, Ontario, May 26.—Brush fires crackled and flamed today within a half mile of the Dionne home and Dafoe Hospital, housing the quintuplets, but that didn't prevent 200 automobiles full of sightseers from converging on the place.

A sign on the road read: "No admission to Dionne quintuplets."

Farmers checked the fires as they neared the hospital. Other fires more distant kept a smoky horizon around the little hospital. No alarm was felt, however.

A change in the wind, it was said, would make it smoky and unpleasant for the babies and the hospital staff and cut off outdoor naps for a while.

One Auto for Every 2 Infantrymen to Be Basis of Setup.

Artillery Also Will Be Speeded to Meet Planes' Pace.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 26.—Authoritative sources disclosed today that the German military command plans a highly mobile infantry and artillery which will enable the army to move at 80 miles an hour "over almost anything except woods."

One motor vehicle for every two infantrymen is the new army's ratio to obtain an unprecedented flexibility and speed."

Open automobiles carrying powerful guns will be used over most roads, sturdy trucks with a capacity of 20 men will be employed on congested highway and near the fronts, and tanks or armored cars are planned for front line service.

Recall Paris Taxi Army.

Military leaders recall the Paris World War taxi army. They aim to make the infantry and artillery into smoothly working complements of the air force.

Light field pieces, splendid highways extending to the frontiers, commissariat equipment, motor vehicles and tanks are included in the array of improvements that a foreign expert describes as "leaving nothing, not even the weather, to chance or the luck of an army."

The underlying principle, he said, is that a future war will be a "fast" one, requiring rapid movement of men and arms to any number of fronts while swift airplanes swoop over an enemy city to destroy communities and morale.

German technicians are represented as attaching as great importance to tanks as to airplanes.

Extraordinary secrecy prevails with regard to tanks, but is is ascumed several types have been perfected so that production could be started immediately. Thousands of such machines—capable of moving rapidly over any terrain and mounting effective guns—could be turned out of German factories in a short time.

With such a scheme this picture is envisaged: Foot soldiers rushed to enemy sectors in small, open automobiles—each of which carries four men; at the destination three would jump out, leaving the driver in the auto for such commands as continuing with the infantry or holding himself ready to pick up his men for a motorized advance.

Replace 77 mm. Guns.

Simultaneously, tanks carrying 75 mm. pieces, machine guns, and crews with sidearms would reach the scene to play a swift part in the advance.

The Germans have adopted the 75 mm. guns to replace the larger 77 mm. pieces.

Great interest attaches to a strange-looking kind of truck, sometimes seen roaring through Berlin streets, with six ordinary wheels, three on a side. Above these is another set of six smaller wheels. It is believed that the smaller wheels can be let down for use, and that they are designed to give better traction over rough grounds.

Fire in Manor Club Forces 150 to Flee

Stubborn Blaze Is Fought at Norbeck, Ind.

A fire in the Manor Club at Norbeck, Md., 15 miles from Washington, caused 150 club members and guests to flee into the open last night.

The fire started in a wall near the boiler room in the basement of the clubhouse and spread to the third floor, damaging the ladies' rest room and locker room and the sleeping quarters of the club employes.

An appeal for help brought the volunteer fire department sof Rockville, Sandy Springs and Silver Springs. The firemen had difficulty in fighting the flames since they were in the walls.

U. S. to Test New Method Of Bond Sale

System May Be Used for Large Operation Due in June.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Undertaking a novel method of raising funds for Government expenses, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau yesterday asked bids for $100,000,000 of 3 per cent 11-13-year bonds. Bids must be for not less than par and accrued interest.

Except for one or two minor incidents during the World War, the Treasury has always offered its bonds to the investing public at par. This is the first time in recent years that bids have been asked for Treasury bonds, although some months ago issues of HOLC and FCA bonds were offered in that manner. Treasury notes are sold on a discount basis.

The fact that the Treasury announced this unusual offering of a comparatively small amount of bonds one week in advance of the time for announcement of the regular quarterly June 15 financial operation led to the belief that the Administration was sending up a trial balloon to test this method of financing.

This impression was strengthened by the fact that 3 p. m. Wednesday was set as the time for the closing of subscription books for the issue just announced. Thus Treasury officials will be in a position to judge the success of selling bonds at bid prices before they finally decide on their plans for the June 15 operation.

Larger Operation Forecast.

All indications point to an offering of $1,000,000,000 of long-term bonds as of June 15. Should the $100,000,000 offering just made meet with success it is most likely that the larger offering will be made on the same basis.

The advantage of this method of financing, from a Treasury viewpoint, is that the Government collects any premium resulting from an interest rate that is out of line with market conditions. Since no bids will be accepted for less than par, the Treasury can not lose.

In other words, this method takes off the shoulders of Treasury officials responsibility for setting a correct interest rate and leaves it to be fixed by the natural forces of the money market. It is a practice long pursued by many States and municipal governments in their financing.

There appears no doubt that the $100,000,000 bond issue just offered will sell at a premium, probably of more than three points. In the first place the 3 per cent interest rate attached to the issue is larger than that of the last bonds offered by the Treasury in a conversion operation. Those bonds, offered in exchange for First Liberties called for June 15, had a 2⅞ per cent interest rate.

Parallels 1934 Offering.

Secondly, the yields on outstanding Treasury issues now range between 1.70 and 2.77 per cent—the lower yields being on bonds maturing in five to eight years. An accurate indication of the worth of such a bond as that now being offered is found in the market quotation for outstanding 3 per cent 11-13-year bonds—of the same series as those announced yesterday. These bonds are selling at 103.30, thus giving a yield of 2.77 per cent.

The new bond will be in all respects identical with an issue of

Ransom in 3 Days or Boy Dies, Captors' Note Warns Parents

Messenger in Kidnaping and the Stolen Child

Weyerhaeusers Ready to Pay $200,000 Price Set on Son, 9.

Law Holding Off To Allow Contact

Agents Ready for Grim Drive if Negotiations at Tacoma Fail.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., May 26.—Forewarned that their kidnaped son had but three days more to live unless ransomed for $200,000, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser worked in the seclusion of their home today to bring about a contact with the abductors and the return of George Weyerhaeuser, 9.

Federal, State and county authorities, mobilized to start after the kidnapers, held off for the time being to give the family every possible opportunity to rescue the boy, but they were ready to start at the drop of a hat.

What the parents were doing toward reaching the ransom note writer was not apparent, but there were signs of behind-the-scene activity.

A bed sheet which had flown from the palatial Weyerhaeuser home since the kidnaping, as if for a signal, was taken down last night. Whether the sheet had any significance in the case could not be learned.

The house was left unguarded. Telephone and mail channels were left open to the worried parents.

Notice in Newspaper.

An advertisement appearing in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer proclaimed their willingness to pay nearly a quarter of a million dollars from the great family fortune for return of the child.

Still another advertisement asked the abductors to make new contact arrangements. Publicity on the audacious crime caused the parents to fear something might go wrong with the initial plan outlined by the extortionists for negotiating.

George has been in the hands of the snatchers 48 hours at noon today and at that time there were no outward indications communication with the abductors had been made.

The ransom note which was described by an authoritative source as saying the kidnaping had been planned for three years, gave the father, Washington and Minnesota timber magnate, until Wednesday to raise the money—"or else!"

One "hot tip" early today sent officers rushing to Dash Point, 5 miles from Tacoma, but it was learned three men and a boy reported acting strangely on a beach were only an innocent fishing party.

Anxiety Grows.

This was the second day of the five allowed Weyerhaeuser to pay the ransom and evident apprehension was seen concerning the fate of the victim as "G-men" of the United States Department of Justice gathered in Tacoma and vicinity.

Speculation as to whether Alvin Karpis, now the country's ranking "public enemy," might have had a hand in the abduction failed to bring any comment from official sources.

Karpis, alleged member of the gang which kidnaped Edward G. Bremer, of St. Paul, for whom $200,000 ransom was paid, has been hunted in the Far West since he and Arthur Campbell shot their way out of a police trap at Atlantic City January 20.

An appeal for "another method of reaching you" was made in one of the advertisements inserted in the Seattle newspaper by the parents.

This and a previous note which said "expect to be ready to come Monday" were signed "Minnie Percy," the name the parents were understood to have been directed to use in establishing contact for payment of $200,000 ransom.

Meanwhile, Federal agents and

Referendum's Outcome Spurs AAA Program

New Contracts Drafted as 6-1 Vote Favors Wheat Control.

By the Associated Press.

Encouraged by returns from Saturday's referendum, Administration officials yesterday began drafting new four-year benefit contracts for wheat farmers and looked with fresh confidence toward favorable congressional action on Secretary Wallace's long-delayed proposal for "clarification" of the AAA law.

Latest unofficial tabulations showed a 6-to-1 count in favor of continuing the wheat-control program. The vote stood 160,564 to 26,327. Secretary Wallace and AAA officials said they expected the official returns, to be announced here later in the week, to show a similar trend.

Some Midwestern Republican congressional leaders said the referendum would have a favorable effect on the AAA amendments to be submitted to the Senate tomorrow, but Senator Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, said a stiff fight would be waged on the licensing provisions relating to dairy products.

"The result was to be expected," Dickinson said of the wheat ballot, adding, "Those voting for continuance of the wheat program are those who expect to be its beneficiaries."

Dickinson said he did not expect the result to have much effect on the "radically modified AAA amendments," but both Senator

G-Men in Running Gun Battle Riddle Extortionist, Foil Gang

Member of Band Falls With Seven Bullets in His Body; Trap Set After Pasadena Banker Gets Demands for $72,000.

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., May 26.—Search for a desperate band of extortionists who lost one of their number in a running gun battle with Federal "G" men and police last night got underway in this area today.

One suspected member of the gang, identified as Jack Williams, 35, lay mumbling in a hospital with two bullets through his neck, two more through his chest, two in his right arm and another in the right hand.

A veteran police officer, Perry Archer, also was wounded but apparently not fatally. His shield deflected a gangster's bullet.

The extortionists had been trying to wrest $72,000 from Herbert D. Ivey, bank president and head of the Pasadena Clearing House Association, under threat of death.

Ten Lives to Get One.

Ivey was warned by the gang that it had little regard for the lives of its ten members; that he could "get" only one or two of them at the most and in that event would surely be marked for death himself.

At that point the Federal men and police stepped in. One United States agent, somewhat resembling Ivey, assumed the role of the victim as the officers maneuvered for two weeks to set their trap.

Four fast motor cars equipped with two-way radio communication and manned by the G-men and San Marino police swung into action after Ivey had received warning by telephone that "this is your last chance to pay off."

Radio in Rumble Seat.

Ivey was given directions to go to a certain place, "pick up a note in a tobacco can and follow instructions." The Federal agent resembling Ivey was assigned to drive the contact car. Under the rumble seat was hidden Detective Lieut. M. E. Frank, operating a two-way radio.

The four cars of officers spread out to cover the territory ahead, behind and on either side of the contact machine. Just as a machine carrying Detective Lieuten-

Boy, 18, Killed In Knife Attack On D.C. Street

Companion Is Stabbed as Women, Man Assail Them After Auto Mishap.

An 18-year-old recent graduate of McKinley High School—his throat slashed and body torn by stabs with a razor-edged knife—died early yesterday in Casualty Hospital, less than an hour after a street quarrel in the 100 block of N street southeast.

The youth, James Joseph Galofaro, of 1004 Virginia avenue southwest, with three companions, was attacked by two colored women and a colored man as he left a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Preston P. Thompson, 61 N street southeast.

According to a story pieced together by homicide squad detectives, Galofaro was backing an automobile from a driveway adjacent to the Thompson home. In the car with him were Ida Mansini, 35, of 609 Sixth street northwest; Harvey Frazier, 34, of 803 G street southwest, and Joseph Galvin, 18, of 1221 Tenth street northwest.

Apparently unable to see behind him, police reported, Galofaro nearly backed his car into the group of persons. Several heated words were exchanged and the youth stepped from the auto to see if any-

American Messiahs

By The Unofficial Observer

(Copyright, 1935, Simon & Schuster, Inc.)

—Installment IX—Viking Invader

This is the ninth installment of "American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders now booming their way across the American political stage.

Floyd Bjernstjerne Olson, Farmer-Labor Governor of Minnesota, is leader in his own right of a "Third Party" which like the La Follette Progressive Party in nearby Wisconsin has become the "First Party" of the State. Hence he is under no obligations to the bugbear of conformity which inhibits political secession in the two-party areas and must be considered—conciliated or beaten—on his own terms.

Those terms are formidable, for Olson describes himself as being "radical as hell" and his party's program frankly proposes to substitute cooperative socialism of the Scandinavian type for the rather devastated regions of the simon-pure profit system in the northern Mississippi Valley region—which is admittedly the decisive political region of the country.

Olson is a Viking of 44. His father was born in Norway, his mother in Sweden, his wife is Czech, his daughter bears the Irish name of Patricia and he speaks Yiddish. He is a hard-headed two-fisted, humorous, hearty man, without an ounce of social theory in his head but with a very practical realization of the need for change.

In an interview published in Today, he is quoted as saying, "I have never read a line of Karl Marx or Lenin and it seems to me the Russians have been too drastic and dictatorial in their methods of creating a new social order. But the fact remains that our own system here has broken down. It no longer fits modern conditions. We've got to change the system."

His career reveals him as a man who loves adventure, has never shrunk from dramatic personal changes, and has faced risks. His father was employed in the railway yards at Minneapolis and was correspondingly subject to the scanty pay and lay-offs of the depression period of the '90's. Times were hard for the Olson family and at an early age—13 years—young Floyd had to help support the household by newspaper route-work. Then he got a job as a freight trucker with

Japan Warns People of Menace On Sea, Hinting at U. S. Navy

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Monday), May 27.—The Japanese navy invoked memories of past glories today in support of its fight for equal rating with the navies of the United States and Great Britain.

It was naval Memorial Day in Japan, the thirtieth anniversary of Togo's destruction of the Czar's Baltic Sea fleet in the battle of the Sea of Japan in 1905.

Significant in the observance of the day was the navy's notice to the people that the direction in which the empire and its sea force smust face to confront "dangers" has changed entirely in the three decades since Togo's triumph.

A pamphlet prepared by the navy's propaganda bureau and distributed throughout the empire said:

"Then (in 1905) Russia was the rival and the danger. Today that is changed. We have had to face in another direction. We are confronting another great sea power which is increasing its navy with Japan as the target."

Although the pamphlet did not name this present day "menace," it was taken authoritatively to mean the United States.

"We need a navy sufficient to protect our sea routes to the continent of Asia and to face the menace in the direction of the great ocean. That is why Japan demands parity with the greatest navies," the pamphlet continued.

"If Japan's just and reasonable demands are rejected by the powers, causing failure of the efforts to reach a new naval agreement and leading to a naval construction race, the responsibility will not be ours. In such case the onl ything for Japan to do is to resort to resolute measures for self-protection.

"Already we are studying means to cope with such a situation, and we are confident that we shall be able to face the rigors of a naval race. We are not afraid of such a building competition."

Spanish Romeo, Ship a Wreck, Hunts New One to Finish Hop

By the Associated Press.

Camocim, Brazil, May 26.—Juan Ignacio Pombo, young Spanish flier, who spanned the Atlantic on a projected flight to Mexico to see a senorita, saved his life but lost his plane today in a crackup at the narrow Camocim Airport.

Forced down by a leaky feed line on a flight from Natal to Belem, Pombo tried to take off again only to have his plane overturn and be demolished. He leaped for his life and escaped with slight leg injuries.

Undismayed he announced his intention to fly on to Belem in a commercial plane, there to make negotiations for a possible continuance of his flight.

Pombo had flown 598 miles from Natal, where he was held up by adverse weather after his 16-hour solo flight across the South Atlantic, before misfortune overtook him.

Although Pombo was encountering misfortunes in South America, in his native Spain, a collection was being taken to reward him for his flight. He also was advised at Natal that the Spanish government has provided 25,000 pesetas for him to complete the flight.

He hats before him eight more stretches in his flight by easy stages, and a prominent Mexican family has offered him the freedom of its home upon his arrival there.

Although Pombo has denied several times that he is engaged to Elena Rivero, the senorita he is flying to see, in his earlier flights in Spain he carried her pictur in an inner pocked of his coat.

Husband in 'Wife-Trade' Case May Ask Divorce

Las Vegas, Nev., May 26 (AP).—Barton Sewell, wealthy Beverly Hills principal in the recent Los Angeles "wife-trading" case, has established residence here, but his attorney, Frank McNamee, jr., declined to comment on reports that he would file suit for divorce Monday.

Mrs. Leah Sewell has a separate maintenance suit pending against him in Los Angeles in which she charges extreme cruelty and misconduct, asks $2,000 a month alimony and the appointment of a receiver for his property, which she claims includes a $28,000,000 trust fund bringing an income of $10,000 a month.

Slight Decline Shows Industry Holding Gains

Little Change in Employment in April; Steel, Mining, Textiles Drop.

Industrial output in April declined slightly, while employment showed little change, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday. This indicated that business was holding fairly well the gains made since the low point of the depression.

The board reported that the downward movement reflected chiefly decreases in output of steel, cotton and silk textiles, and bituminous coal, partly offset by increased mill consumption of wool and a larger output of anthracite.

Steel mill output declined from 49 per cent of capacity in March to 45 per cent in April and showed a slight further drop in the first three weeks of May. In the automobile industry there was a further increase in production in April, followed by a decline in the early part of May, partly as a consequence of labor disputes, the board reported.

"In the tobacco industry activity was maintained at recent high levels. Output of bituminous coal declined sharply at the beginning of April, following a period of relatively high production earlier in the year.

"Total value of construction contracts of all kinds, as reported by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, showed little change from March to April. A further increase in residential projects was offset in the total by a decline in contracts for other types of construction."

The decline in mining brought about an unseasonal decline in car loadings, the report said. Commodity prices were reported to have changed little.

In its report on bank credit, the board said:

"During the five weeks ended May 22 member bank balances with the Federal Reserve banks increased to $4,820,000,000, the highest figure on record, and excess reserves rose to a new high level of over $2,350,000,000. The principal factors in the increase of member bank reserve balances were the disbursement by the Treasury of $240,000,000 of funds previously held in the form of cash or on deposit with the Federal Reserve banks and further gold imports of $90,000,000.

"Deposits of reporting banks in leading cities increased further during the four-week period ending May 15, reflecting chiefly disbursements by the United States Treasury.

"Yields on short-term Government securities declined slightly further during this period, while other short-term open-market money rates remained at low levels."

At the same time, the extent of indirect employment provided by the Public Works Administration was indicated in a report of the Bureau of Labor Statistics made public by Secretary Ickes. The report showed that 250,000,000 hours of employment were given workers in mines, mills and factories producing steel and iron for public works projects.

At 40 hours a week, this would provide steady work for 125,000 men for one year.

The report showed that on March 15 a total of 617,700 men were employed in the iron and steel industry as compared with 401,700 on March 15, 1933. The gain was more than 50 per cent.

The report said that approximately six tons of basic commodities are required for each ton of finished steel. About 3,500,000 tons of finished steel and iron have been ordered for use on public works projects, requiring production of 21,000,000 tons of basic commodities. In addition to the work of producing these raw materials, employment was provided in manufacture of machinery and in transportation.

Chauffeur Ends Life Because Bonus Failed

Concord, N. H., May 26 (AP).—George T. Driscoll, 38-year-old chauffeur for former U. S. Senator George H. Moses, was reported a suicide today by police who said Driscoll had become disconsolate over failure of the soldier bonus bill.

Driscoll, generally credited here with knowing more of Moses' personal and official business than probably any other person, was found dead, a shotgun by his side, near his home. The chauffeur entered Moses' employ nine years ago and according to generally accepted belief here, Moses told the chauffeur many of his plans and ideas. Efforts of others to learn of Moses' attitude on public questions, through Driscoll always were met with polite silence.

Woman Pilot Killed, Man Injured in Spin

New York, May 26 (AP).—Miss Friedl Braun, 22, was killed and an unidentified man, a passenger in her plane, was injured seriously when the plane spun 2,500 feet today, struck the corner of a house and crashed.

Miss Braun, who had flown 125 hours as a pilot, rented the light dual-control biplane and went up from Roosevelt Field. Witnesses said they saw the plane go into a left spin at 3,500 feet, level out at 800 feet and then go into a right spin. The wing struck the corner of a house owned by Dr. Richard Martorelli, near Waterbury, Long Island. Doctors said they hoped to save the life of the passenger.

Between You and Me

Government by Blackjack Threatens; Senator Hayden Facing Recall.

By Raymond Clapper

NOT so long ago many people were fearful that the United States was drifting into a dictatorship. But for the moment at least that fear has subsided. Now we are threatend with something worse — Government by blackjack.

What is happening to Senator Carl Hayden, of Arizona? He served in the House and is now in his second Senate term. Intelligent, tireless in working for the interests of his State, he averages well up in the higher senatorial brackets as a desirable legislator. He hasn't distinguished himself as a fanatical New Dealer nor as a blind reactionary. He has done what an intelligent man would be expected to do, studied the problems as they arose and applied to them his best common sense. So, in the course of events, the soldier bonus came up and he voted to sustain the President's veto.

Within 24 hours after that news hit Arizona, petitions calling for his recall began to circulate. They don't want to wait until the end of his term and vote him in or out on the basis of his whole record. No, the minute he doesn't please one group, out comes the blackjack.

The attempt on the Pacific Coast to organize another bonus march is a like instance, although cooler headed veteran organization officials here say that the potential bonus marchers wont be so anxious to leave their relief stations now. In 1932 they had nothing to lose by marching on Washington.

But there is no reason to single out the veterans. The farmers who marched on Washington a few days ago to demand continuation of AAA were using the blackjack. William Green, head of the A. F. of L., threatens a general strike if the Wagner labor disputes bill and NRA extension don't go through. He, too, falls back on the blackjack. Father Coughlin stirs a New York audience to boo Senator Wagner because he opposed the bonus, although if those who indulged in this hysterical outburst stopped to think about it later, they knew that no one had more consistently championed measures in their own interest at Washington—and before the depression caused Mr. Roosevelt to revive the Forgotten Man. But the blackjack never stops to think.

All of this raises a fundamental problem in government. It is the antithesis of representative government. Worse than dictatorship which does centralize responsibility, it is irresponsible and sporadic clubbing of legislators by special groups.

If representative government is going to work—and it probably will—it needs to be given a chance. A Senator or Representative is properly called to account at the end of his term when he goes back to his constituents. His record as a whole is judged and shaken down into a final answer. He can not hope to please every group among his voters. The most he can do is to convince them that all in all he has done what seemed to him best for them as a whole and for the country as a whole. Often the verdict may be unjust and an inferior man may replace him. This is not the perfect system, but it appears the best one yet devised for a people of our traditions.

It can not work, however, if legislators and executive officials are to be constantly terrorized. You might as well let a surgeon try to operate with the patient's family hovering around telling him what to do if he wanted to stay on the case.

That does not mean that all sides should not be heard, express their views, debate either in committee hearings or on the stump. Public debate is the opposite of what is going on now. One is an attempt to thresh out a problem. The other is an attempt to dictate the answer by force. Something like the difference between a trial and a lynching.

If you notice a certain cartoon appearing anywhere, depicting the Wagner labor relations bill carrying a dagger behind its back and extending a hand to a character labelled "American Worker" who says, "Oh, Yeah? I Don't Like Your Looks," take a second look and see if the cartoon is labelled as coming from the American Iron and Steel Institute. The Institute is sending these free cartoons out in matrix form to newspapers. The finished matrix gives no indication of the source. Curiously, the cartoon is entitled, "He Isn't Fooling Anybody."

Some one in the Department of Agriculture has taken his life in his hands and issued a circular about the black widow spider who has a vicious bite and eats her mate and often her young. He calls her the "family arbiter."

No one has shot him for that yet.

Women reporters who are assigned to Mrs. Roosevelt are as thorough and conscientious in reporting her activities as their male colleagues who cover the President.

When Mr. Roosevelt went to the Capitol to read his bonus veto message, Mrs. Roosevelt sat in a special gallery. In the press gallery, the women reporters were dashing about, writing running accounts of Mrs. Roosevelt appearing in the gallery, with descriptions of her costume and the large knitting bag which she carried.

One of the newspaper gals scurried out to the telegraph wires with a batch of copy. The wire operator asked if she expected to write anything more.

"No, I don't expect to," she replied, "unless Mrs. Roosevelt starts to knit."

Senate Rules Need Revising, Garner Advises Colleagues

Vice President Finds Self Forced to Deny Moves He Favors.

By the Associated Press.

Those well-nigh impregnable Senate rules are under fire again—this time by Vice President Garner.

The chunky Texan said yesterday a "thorough revision of the Senate rules would be a wholesome thing."

But he emphasized he did not wish to take away any of the unlimited freedom of debate.

Just what he was after Garner would not say, but a fair idea was given by the Senate last Thursday when he was forced to uphold points of order against a batch of amendments to the Navy bill offered by members of the Munitions Investigating Committee.

After ruling out of order an amendment by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to prohibit modifications of ship construction contracts without the approval of the Comptroller General, Garner made his longest talk to the Senate since he became presiding officer.

He indicated he favored the amendment, but the rules were strict that new legislation could not be incorporated in an appropriation bill, although this was permissible on any other bill.

"Let the chair say for the benefit of the members of the Senate, as well as the record," he said, "that while a member of another body, and having occasion a number of times to preside over the committee of the whole, and later on over the House itself, he was called upon to rule upon many amendments which appealed very much to the chair.

"He would have liked to see them become part of the pending legislation, but as it was then the duty of the presiding officer to interpret the rules of the House, as it is now his duty to interpret the rules of the Senate, he sometimes found himself in a position where he was compelled to sustain points of order against amendments for which otherwise he himself would have voted."

A Speaker of the House may vote any time on legislation, as demonstrated last week by Speaker Byrns when he voted to sustain the President's bonus veto. But the Vice President exercises this privilege only in event of tie votes.

Honest Man Finds $1,000 Liberty Bond

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 26.—A $1,000 Liberty bond, which Miss Francis C. Leland dropped from her purse on a downtown street, was back in her possession today. Discovering her loss, she notified police. A patrolman set out to question persons working in the block, located the friend of a man who found the bond, and had it returned to its owner.

Veterans Trounce 6 'Red' Disturbers

Woman of Group Cried Down With War.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—Six Communists who shouted "Down with war and Fascism!" and "Down with the legion" at a memorial service of an American Legion post in Central Park today were roundly trounced by incensed legionnaires and turned over to police.

The disturbance came during an address by Col. Robert Starr Allyn, who condemned pacifism.

The Communists, one of whom was a woman, arose from their seats and began to shout. They threw hundreds of pamphlets into the air. Then the legionnaires went into action.

Those arrested gave the names of Sara Rich, 30; James Stevens, 19; Joseph Siff, 20; Joseph Green, 18; Frank Zavit, 25, and Frank Trust, 29. They were booked on disorderly conduct charges.

By the Associated Press.

A $31,750 pay check was shown in security commission reports yesterday to have gone in 1934 to the average chief executive of an industrial corporation substantial enough to list its securities on a stock exchange.

Seven hundred and seventy-one such executives have reported their earnings to the commission. Last year they received an aggregate of $24,480,972.

Of the 771, a total of 172 executives received $50,000 or more. The range of payments was from a few hundreds to $365,000.

2,000 Yet to File.

The salaries were reported in connection with applications of corporations to the commission for permanent listing of their securities on stock exchanges. Some 2,000 more corporations have yet to file salary information, but it was not expected the additional filings will greatly affect the $31,750 average.

Of the 172 executives receiving $50,000 or more, 118 were paid between $50,000 and $75,000, 29 between $75,000 and $100,000 and 17 between $100,000 and $150,000.

A final top eight, to make the total of 172, were paid $150,000 or more—twice the salary of the President of the United States.

Thomas Watson at Top.

Thomas J. Watson, New York, president, International Business Machines Corporation, received $365,358 in salary and bonus; Charles M. Schwab, New York, chairman, Bethlehem Steel Corporation, $250,000 in salary; George Gordon Crawford, president, now resigned, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, $250,000 in salary and bonus. These three were the only ones so far reporting who received $200,000 or more.

Right near the top was Rufus L. Patterson, New York, president of American Machine & Foundry Co., with $197,000.

The other three of the eight were: E. R. Crawford, Duquesne, Pa., president, McKeesport Tin Plate Co., $173,750; Cornelius F. Kelly, New York, president, Anaconda Copper Co., $171,666; Joseph Wilshire, New York, president, Standard Brands, Inc., $152,559.

The salary data is filed with the commission for information of stockholders and investors. A substantial number of corporations have held this information confidential or have indicated they would file at a later date. Some 1,400 companies have applied for permanent listing, including the 771 which filed salaries.

A hundred companies have sent the information in separate envelopes to Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the commission, objecting to public disclosure. The other companies not filing salaries usually say they will be supplied at a later date, as permitted by the commission.

2 Women, Man Hurt In 'Family Dispute'

Masie Heaney Not Expected to Survive Wounds.

A man and two women were injured seriously yesterday in what police described as a "family argument" in the 400 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Masie Heaney, 40, was admitted to Emergency Hospital with head injuries, lacerations of the head and face, paralysis of the right arm and injuries of the jaw.

Nellie M. Hawkins, 43, was taken to Casualty Hospital with concussion of the brain, lacerations and bruises. Will H. Lanson, 42, was treated for head lacerations.

Police said the three lived together at the Massachusetts avenue address. None of those injured could explain the affair and its origin remained a mystery to investigators. The Heaney woman is not expected to live, physicians reported.

World Tin Consumption.

New York, May 26, (AP).—World tin consumption in March amounted to 12,685 tons against 10,086 in February, according to official statistics submitted to the International Tin pool. Consumption in the United States during the month totalled 6,500 tons against 4,071 in February.

Treasury Stirs New Debate Over 'Intoxicating' Liquors

Bill Submitted to Define Even Beer in That Category.

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury, it was learned yesterday, has stirred up a new and bitter congressional fight over what constitutes "intoxicating liquor." It has submitted to the House Ways and Means Committee a bill designed to strengthen the laws against liquor tax evaders.

The first section of the bill includes language defining as "intoxicating" anything containing one-half of 1 per cent of alcohol by volume. That would include spirituous, vinous, fermented or malt beverages. In other words, even beer.

Early in 1933 Congress declared that beer of 3.2 per cent alcohol by weight was noninioxicating, and legalized it before the prohibition amendment was repealed.

On the House roll call when that bill was passed, 24 of the present 25 House Ways and Means Committeemen were recorded. A preponderant majority voted for the bill, in effect contending that 3.2 beer was not intoxicating. A check of that 1933 roll call showed the committee divided 19 to 5 in favor of 3.2 beer.

Anomalous Situation.

To vote now that anything containing more than one-half of 1 per cent is intoxicating, some of these committeemen contend, would put them in an anomalous situation, and they are worried about it.

The Treasury told the committee it would not insist upon inclusion of language declaring that all beverages containing more than ½ of 1 per cent were intoxicating. In fact, C. M. Hester, Treasury attorney, testified he was willing for that language to be stricken out. But he added that its inclusion would be very helful from a tax-collection standpoint.

Already the committee has debated that point for hours. It defeated, 12 to 9, a motion to strike out that section. As soon as NRA is out of the way, the vote will be reconsidered and the fight resumed.

Effect On State Laws.

In addition to the question of contradictions in personal records, committeemen pointed out that the Treasury's bill might have an effect upon State liquor laws that should be definitely determined.

In some States, it was said State laws define as "intoxicating liquor" anything that is so described by Federal law. Hence, in Wisconsin, one committeeman said, neither beer nor anything else containing more than ½ of 1 per cent alcohol by volume would be legal.

Stamp Lack Shunts Bonus Veto Vote Plea

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., May 26.—Hereafter, when Alexander Lee Coble, commander of Winchester Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, desires to make haste, he will do so more slowly, he said today.

Last week Coble addressed a petition to Senator Harry F. Byrd asking the Senator to vote to override the President's veto of the Patman bonus bill. To speed it, he sent it special delivery.

Yesterday, two days after the Senate had sustained the President, Coble was notified by the Washington Postoffice that his letter was held for lack of sufficient postage.

Gains Reported In Land Value Of U. S. Farms

Agriculture Department Notes General Increase, With Credit Easier.

By the Associated Press.

A general upturn in farm real estate values for the first time in more than a decade and an easing in the farm credit situation were reported simultaneously yesterday by the Agriculture Department and the Farm Credit Administration.

Entering its third year tomorrow, the Credit Administration said it had loaned $3,000,000,000 in the last two—averaging $4,000,000 a day—and said 90 per cent of the money advanced had been used by farmers to pay creditors, resulting in an interest saving of $35,000,000 annually.

A three-point rise in the index of farm real estate values in the year ended March 1, or 79 compared with 76 in 1934, and the "depression low" of 73 in 1933, was announced by the Agriculture Department. The period 1912-14 represents 100.

Values were reported to have increased last year in 30 States, to have remained virtually unchanged in 13 and to have dropped slightly in 5. The largest gains were reported in cotton States, the decreases in the drought area.

Attributing the "general improvements" to "increased farm income," the bureau said farm real estate values also were aided by "relieved credit conditions" and "an expansion of the farm mortgage credit facilities of the Farm Credit Administration."

Deputy Gov. F. F. Hill said that in the two years the Credit Administration had advanced farm mortgage loans aggregating $1,728,000,000, short-term production credits of $955,000,000 and loans to farmers' co-operatives totaling $241,000,000. He added:

"Payment of creditor claims has helped to stabilize farm values and now instead of trying to dispose of farm mortgage holdings, many creditors are taking advantage of the opportunity to make additional loans."

Applications for loans, Hill said, have dropped from 15,000 to 20,000 a week in 1933 to 3,000 to 4,000 at present.

House Will Get Bill Today for Two-Year NRA

Supreme Court Will Rule on Present Law Today or Next Monday.

where a wage scale contract expires the same day as NRA, June 16. No attempt is being made to write a new contract or to extend the present one pending settlement of the NRA controversy or final action on the Guffey bill.

Besides the NRA case, the Supreme Court also is expected to rule today or next Monday on the Frazier-Lemke act, which provides a way in which farmers can scale down their mortgage obligations in proportion to the depreciation of the value of their lands caused by the depression.

AAA Up in Senate.

While the House is considering NRA legislation the Senate is expected to take up the amendments designed to "clarify" the Agricultural Adjustment Act. The House has laid aside consideration of these amendments to make way for consideration of NRA. The Senate will consider the rewritten House bill as a substitute for the Senate measure, although it still has not been debated by the House.

Senator McNary, Republican leader, said that much Republican opposition to the bill has been quieted by the House committee's revision, but he said a fight would be made to strip from the Secretary of Agriculture discretionary authority to license handlers of wool, mohair, fruits and vegetables if two-thirds of the farmers in a given area agree.

Senator Nye gave his unqualified support to the amendments and Senator Robinson said he believed the House amendments had eliminated much of the ground for opposition.

Following President Roosevelt's veto of the Patman bill hopes for any bonus legislation at this session have almost been abandoned. Possibility of another bonus army with demands for action at this session still exist. The Associated Press reported from Los Angeles that Royal M. Robertson, bonus march leader, was marshaling 1,000 to 1,500 men for a march on Washington.

Potential bonus marchers were reported to be gathering in the Western city, from which they expect to go to San Francisco, where the march to Washington will start, if plans are carried out.

League Scores TVA.

While the Norris bill, intended to extend the power of the TVA, has been tabled by the House Military Affairs Committee, members of the committee are planning to meet tomorrow to discuss the possibility of a substitute measure.

Meanwhile, the American Liberty League, in its weekly statement, attacked the TVA.

"Never have the dreams of bureaucrats flowered so perfectly as in the Tennessee Valley," it said. "Bureaucracy thrives on interference in the affairs of individuals and in the conduct of business. In the Tennessee Valley the lives of the people are to be shifted into new paths. Economic planning is to be applied to an entire industrial area.

"Unless the courts intervene, the TVA may become more potent than the government of any of the seven States in which it exerts its influence. It will tolerate the Congress which created it only to the extent that it must turn to it for new funds."

Referring to proposed TVA amendments, the league said:

"The attempt to circumvent court decisions through the enactment of the pending legislation is indicative of a disregard for the principles upon which our Government was founded."

Paris Seeks Check On Gold Outflow

Lebrun and cabinet members.

Edouard Herriot, former premier and now a minister without portfolio, has already promised his support of Flandin's program and observers scouted opposition claims that the cabinet is split over the financial question.

The government today received numerous resolutions from French economic groups demanding maintenance of the franc at its present gold value.

The cabinet will consider Flandin's three-point program to put France's financial house in order. It calls for full decree powers, first to balance the budget; second, to push economic recovery, and third, to defend the franc and public credit.

Opponents claimed the full powers would also permit the government to devalue the franc should Great Britain and the United States stabilize their currencies, enabling new currency ratios to be established among the world's great financial powers.

A constitutional amendment would be needed to change the gold value of the franc, but Flandin could follow President Roosevelt's course by establishing an embargo on gold.

Teacher Avers Kidnaped Child Will Stay Calm

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, May 26.—Nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser, kidnaped here Friday, "would never get panicky," his teacher, Miss Lucille Berg, declared today, describing him as "one of the most lovable little chaps I've had in my teaching experience."

"He has a wonderful sense of balance and high intelligence. I don't think his being held a captive would excite him because of his unusually sound mentality," she added.

"When he makes a decision it is always just right and I believe he will be able to take care of himself. He doesn't jump at conclusions, but thinks things out. And you can depend on his decision.

"I have been his teacher since last September and have come to love him deeply. He has a keen sense of humor and whenever a funny story was told in class his eyes would brighten and a little smile would play over his face.

"George always was doing nice things for people and was very accommodating. In our recent Red Cross drive he was especially diligent and through his efforts our class made the best showing at school.

"He has such an endearing personality I don't think his kidnapers would harm him."

D. C. Youth Killed In Street Attack

one had been injured. The pedestrians became hostile and threatening, the police said.

Clutches Throat, Falls.

Galofaro was struck and knocked down, it was reported. Galvin jumped from the car and started to his friend's aid. A scuffle ensued and Galofaro suddenly dropped to the ground, clutching his throat.

In the dim light of a street lamp other members of the party said, they saw the blade of a knife flash and then Galvin dropped with a cry of pain.

Shouting and cursing the attackers advanced toward Frazier and the waman, still seated in Galofaro's car, then apparently changed their minds and fled into a dark alley.

The injured youths were taken to Casualty Hospital. Galofaro died on the operating table. Galvin was treated for deep lacerations of his arms and back.

Witnesses were unable to tell police whether the knife was wielded by one of the women or the man. Descriptions of the suspected trio were broadcast.

Flee as Aid Arrives.

Galofaro and his friends were attending a party at the Thompson home, police were told, and the youth left to drive his companions home. Several others in the house knew nothing of the fight until startled by screams from the street. Thompson, foreman of the Capital Excavating Yards next door to his home, told investigators the attackers had escaped when he and several other men hurried from the house.

Young Galofaro, according to members of his family, was graduated in February from McKinley High School. He was not employed.

An intensive search for the suspects is underway.

Kidnapers Give Stolen Boy, 9, 3 Days to Live

Captors of Heir Want $200,000 Wednesday, 'Or Else,' Note Says.

State, county and city authorities apparently relaxed their vigilance to allow the Weyerhaeuser family full freedom of their attempts to bring about safe return of the boy, who vanished Friday noon.

The Federal operatives converged on Tacoma from San Francisco and other Coast cities, ready to take up the hunt for the kidnapers whenever the parents might indicate any breakdown in negotiations or the return of the boy.

All members of the Seattle detective force were ordered to search for a man, about whom authorities would only say that he was sought on a "hot tip" in the case.

The ransom note threatened death for the boy unless the $200,000 was paid by Wednesday.

Some 27 hours after a special-delivery letter was taken to the Weyerhaeuser home the family inserted the first advertisement in the Seattle paper last night. It reads: "Expect to be ready to come Monday. Answer, Percy Minnie."

The second, which was received at the newspaper a short time later but too late to stop appearance of the first, said:

"Due publicity beyond our control please indicate another method of reaching you. Hurry, relieve anguished mother. Percy Minnie."

Off on Secret Mission.

At the time the notes were inserted, F. R. Whitcomb, of Tacoma, brother of Mrs. Weyerhaeuser, and Charles Ingram, said to have been chosen by the family as its representative in negotiations, were reported to have left the home on a secret mission. It was believed they might be attempting to make contact with the kidnapers.

The ransom note, which authentic sources said was signed "The Egoist," was in an envelope, it was learned, which bore a scrawled signature, presumably that of the kidnaped boy.

While checking all available leads, particularly movements of underworld characters in Northwest cities, investigators dug back into the records of the unsolved mass-murder mystery in which six persons were slaughtered in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder at Erland Point near Bremerton, Wash., in March, 1934.

One high official, who refused to permit his name to be used, advanced the possibility that the same gang which shocked the world when it left six mutilated bodies, including the Flieders, scattered in the beach home, may have some connection with the kidnaping.

"If those cold-blooded killers were in desperate financial shape they would not stop at anything," he said.

Girl Gives Clue.

Authorities were working on a clue provided by the 16-year-old daughter, Jean, of A. B. Comfort, former reading clerk in the State House of Representatives.

She was reported to have told her father of seeing three men in a tan sedan parked in front of Lowell School, which the missing lad attended, for four or five days.

The time of the disappearance of George was placed at 12:05 p. m., in front of Annie Wright Seminary, exclusive girls' school. Mrs. Thomas E. Moffitt, a friend of the Weyerhaeusers, said she saw the boy in front of the seminary at that time and spoke to him.

G-Men Riddle Gangster, Foil Extortion Plot

ants Archer and Harry Miller, and a Department of Justice man said to have been B. E. Sackett, acting agent in charge, arrived where the tobacco can was hidden they saw a mysterious car drive away. Trailing it at high speed, they forced it to the curbing.

"We all jumped out and as we approached the car the man at the wheel opened fire," Miller said. "I saw Archer stagger back and knew he was hit. So I and the Department of Justice man opened up. Together we filled him full of lead."

Williams was booked at the prison ward in the county general hospital on suspicion of attempted extortion and attempted murder.

Sackett and Chief of Police Eugene Woods waited long at the bedside of the pale, thin and partly bald prisoner. He mumbled something which they would not repeat.

Ivey, president of the Citizens National Trust and Savings Bank, and his wife looked searchingly at Williams, but did not disclose whether they had recognized him.

Family Aids Threatened.

Since last May 9 the wealthy banker had been receiving notes and telephone calls demanding payment of the $72,000, with threats of death to himself, members of his family and his banking aids.

A possible kidnaping attempt was frustrated on May 12 by Mrs. Ivey when an unidentified, armed man sought to enter their home through a ruse. Mrs. Ivey slammed the door as her husband stood nearby. Then things began to happen.

The banker received a note signed "The Gang," which read:

"You have not escaped our hands yet. The only reason you didn't get the works was that the gun failed to work. Next time it will be different. We have plenty of stuff to start a young war and we intend to do it if necessary.

Claim Ten in Gang.

"Now if you don't follow these instructions it will cost you a hell of a lot more in the end. Here they are:

"We have elected you to get from each manager of a branch of the Citizens Bank $2,000 to be delivered tonight, including yourself in the deal. We believe there is 36 branches. That will mean you get together $72,000. We know nearly all the branch managers and intend to get next to the rest of them in a short time.

"If you want to live in peace and not be bothered the rest of your life you had better do as instructed. The same goes for the branch men. We mean business, or else. There are ten of us and you can't get more than one or two. Then the rest will give their lives to get yours.

First Contact Fails.

"If you are willing to obey our demands, place the following ad in Tuesday's Examiner in the personal column:

"H-De-Eye come home. Everything okay.

"H-De-Eye will be the code in our notes to you. Follow carefully."

Police said Ivey had received a number of notes and telephone calls after that. Several days ago, they said, Ivey followed instructions in a series of notes which led to five widely separated contact points, but contact with the extortionists failed.

On May 12, Ivey said, he received a telephone call from a man who claimed to represent a delivery service and stated he held a damaged package which he wished to deliver in person. The banker armed himself and stood nearby when Mrs. Ivey opened the door. Ivey ordered the man to open the package.

"Haven't you got a knife to open it?" the banker asked.

The man reached into his pocket and drew a pistol, snapping: "Come out!"

Mrs. Ivey slammed the door and turned out the light. The man fled.

What, if anything, was found in the tobacco can by the officers last night was not disclosed, but Federal Agent Hackett said:

"If there are ten men in this game we are out to get them."

Just Greek to common folk.

Alice, you remember, couldn't make head or tail out of "Jabberwocky" until she held it up to a mirror. Then it became perfectly legible . . . just like alphabet soup.

That's the trouble with the Washington Political Wonderland. It has to be explained. The amateur dinner table explainers do such a poor job of it, because it was explained to them only last week.

But The Washington Post has a little mirror to reflect the passing political show in order that you may understand why the Bumpstead bill was thrown out the window, and why lame duck Senator Sorehead was given a crutch. Better still, this little mirror tells you Who Said What and Why during those fateful hours before the reporters arrived on the scene.

This magic mirror, of course, is The Post's column, "Between You and Me," and the chief mirror polisher is none other than Raymond Clapper, that famous newspaperman who cut his eyeteeth on a portable typewriter and who has covered more political affairs than the shadow of Sir Basil Zaharoff. Clapper knows Washington so well that he could be blindfolded and still find his way to any given office in the Department of Commerce Building. He keeps his ears and eyes open, however, and he sees and hears more than a censor at a burlesque show.

Clapper covered his first National political convention in 1920. He yawned through the 1924 Democratic Walkathon while Alabama was casting those 24 votes for Oscar W. Underwood. In 1928 and 1932 he was again in the Press Box, and he reported the 1930 Naval Conference in London when American diplomats sank battleships to please Europe and European statesmen sank putts to please themselves. His book, "Racketeering in Washington," was such an expose of Nepotism that a certain Congressman fired six relatives in one afternoon. Clapper traveled more than 10,000 miles last year to learn the state of the Nation, and he covered the San Francisco general strike. For years, he was chief of the United Press' Washington Bureau. His by-line is world famous.

And his column, "Between You and Me," is required reading for the Man-Who-Must-Know. Clear, accurate, interpretative, Clapper's articles give you the Low Down on the Higher Ups, the running account of the New Deal, the back-stage scenes of the political Show-Shop. Veterans Here Organize New Bonus March 500 at Public Rally Vote 1932 Leader of "Army" Back in Command.

Threatening to bring 25,000 veterans to Washington within the next 15 days, a group of former service men—remnants of the 1932 bonus march—gathered yesterday on a parking lot in the 200 block of John Marshall place northwest, to complete early preparations for invasion of a "bigger and stronger army" to protest against President Roosevelt's veto of bonus legislation.

Ostensibly, leaders of the movement declared, the meeting was called to hear discussion of proposals to enroll veterans in various CCC camps. Of some 500 veterans who attended the open-air gathering only 25 agreed to enlist, it was reported. An open forum followed and the new bonus march movement was started.

1,500 Quartered in District.

It was estimated that 1,500 veterans are now quartered in transient shelters throughout the city. An additional 2,500 are awaiting orders in Texas to start for Washington, it was announced. Leaders of the new "army" elected yesterday were:

Commander Smith, leader of a bonus contingent in the 1932 march, announced that "left wing" elements in the new movement would not be tolerated. He said that a temporary headquarters would be established at John Marshall place and C street northwest.

Veterans, Smith related, are moving rapidly into Washington from all sections of the country.

Arrivals Going to Bureau.

Invading members of the new march, Smith declared, will be sent to the Transient Bureau for shelter. They will come here as transients—via freight trains and the open highway.

A number of meetings are scheduled this week to complete final arrangements. Newly arriving veterans, Smith said, will not leave Washington "until the bonus question is settled to their satisfaction."

Last night, various State representatives planned to send "marching calls" to every section of the country. Leaders of yesterday's meeting loudly announced intentions of importing 25,000 veterans within the next two weeks.

"This is not idle talk," one veteran declared. "We did it before and we can do it again. A great majority of the Nation's former service men are ready and waiting to come here—and we are going to bring them."

Robertson's "Army" Dwindles to 11 Men

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, May 26.—The bonus army of R. W. Robertson dwindled to 11 persons, including four salesmen, when the army met this morning to prepare to march on Washington to demand immediate payment of the bonus.

"Well," said Robertson, a leader of the ill-fated "B. E. F." of 1932, "I guess we won't start before Tuesday."

He had promised at least 1,000 Los Angeles veterans would be ready, but he admitted today that this guess was "probably high."

In announcing the expedition last week, Robertson said the "march" of thousands of veterans—more than 7,000 from California alone—would be joined by former soldiers from other States. They were to travel by automobile.

Frank Belgrano, national commander of the American Legion, discouraged the Robertson march and said it would deter the bonus cause. He asked legionnaires not to participate in the expedition.

U. S. to Try Out A Par-Bid Plan For Bond Issue

New $100,000,000 Flotation of 3's Also Requires Accrued Interest.

$824,507,900 3 per cent Treasury bonds of 1946-48 issued last June, except the new issue will be dated December 15, 1934, and interest accrues from that date. They are tax-exempt, except from estate or inheritance taxes and surtaxes and excess-profit and war-profits taxes.

Bids for the new bonds will be received at Federal Reserve banks and their branches up until 3 p. m. Wednesday. Each tender must state the face amount of bonds bid for, which must be $1,000 or any even multiple thereof, and the price offered, which must be stated exclusive of accrued interest and must be expressed on the basis of 100, with fractions expressed as thirty-seconds of 1 per cent, as for example:—103 29-32. Accrued interest from December 15, 1934, to June 3, when the new bonds will be issued, amounts to $14.010989 on each $1,000.

Immediately after the closing hour for the receipt of tenders, the bids made will be examined and announcement of the acceptable prices will follow as soon as possible. The Treasury reserves the right to reject any or all tenders or parts of tenders. The total amount accepted will be within 10 per cent of the $100,000,000 figure.

Meanwhile, Mr. Morgenthau announced that approximately $744,000,000 of the First Liberty Loan bonds, called for June 15, had been exchanged for 2⅞ per cent 20-25 year Treasury bonds. The subscription books closed last Thursday. Approximately $864,000,000 of the called Firsts previously were exchanged for 1⅝ per cent 5-year Treasury notes, making about $1,608,000,000 of the First Liberties refunded into lower interest rate securities or 83 per cent of the amount outstanding.

This means that the Treasury on June 15 must redeem approximately $300,000,000 of the First Liberties in cash. In addition, $416,602,800 of 3 per cent notes mature on June 15. Thus, to cover those two items alone, the Treasury must have on hand more than $700,000,000.

The Treasury's working balance is now down to $717,982,515, the lowest it has been for many months. With the machinery geared to put the $4,000,000,000 works relief program in motion, expenditures are expected within a few days suddenly to jump upward. Another reason for replenishing the working balance.

Thus it is figured the Treasury will need approximately $1,000,000,000 on June 15, without taking into consideration the maturity on August 1 of $353,865,000 of 1¼ per cent notes. Treasury chieftains declined to discuss their June 15 plans, however. They explained that no change was contemplated in bill issues—that is, issuance of $100,000,000 weekly to cover $75,000,000 of bill maturities and add $25,000,000 weekly to the general fund. Issuance of certificates has indefinitely been abandoned, since the six and nine month bills sell for a lower average interest rate.

Mr. Morgenthau yesterday also announced the closing of subscription books at the end of business Wednesday for the 1½ per cent four-year HOLC bonds. The offering was announced last Monday in exchange for the 4 per cent HOLC bonds called for redemption on July 1. Approximately $136,000,000 of the new bonds had been subscribed for through Friday, the Treasury chief revealed.

Hollywood

Hollywood Characters

Hollywood, May 24.

THERE is a writing team in Hollywood that compares with the best salesmen in the country. These two writers know how to sell their scenarios. They are not Hechts or MacArthurs when they sit at their typewriters but they are the best demonstrators in the business. They write their yarn and then visit a producer personally. It is then that they put on their act.

One of the authors sits and reads the scenario to the producer. The other author sits and listens and as the story unfolds he registered the emotion that every scene calls for. At the tense moments he will smoke a cigarette furiously, put it out, pace the floor and exclaim: "This part's so exciting, it just gets me!" At a comedy scene he will roar with laughter. It is like having an audience present and you'd be surprised how producers fall for this act.

• • • •

Robert Hopkins, better known as Hoppie, a scenario writer at Metro, is another character. Hoppie is generally called in when a scenario needs a little fixing up. If Hoppie is in his office or sitting at his typewriter, then Hoppie isn't really working.

But if you see Hoppie walking back and forth in the street from the writers' building to the commissary, you can bet Hoppie is working. He doesn't carry a pencil or paper. When he gets an idea he picks up a piece of paper from the street, asks the first person he meets for a pencil and jots down his idea. Then he hurries to tell it to the supervisor. This is Hopkins' working method and he is the highest salaried gag writer at Metro.

• • • •

ONE of the most bitter rivalries in the cinema town exists between two bootblacks. They are Slickem, who shines them up at Metro, and Oscar Smith, who shines them up at Paramount. Central avenue is the Harlem district of Los Angeles and both Oscar and Slickem insist he is the king of Central avenue.

Oscar has been at Paramount longer than any star and every executive, with the exception of Adolph Zukor. He has shined the shoes of Wallace Reid, Emil Jannings, Thomas Meighan and practically any former favorite you can mention.

• • • •

Slickem is younger, taller and more of the sheik type. When many of the actresses and actors at Metro want to go night clubbing along Central avenue, that is, visiting the real hot spots that the average person doesn't know about, it is Slickem who arranges the party and goes along as the guide. Slickem took a personal interest in Nina Mae McKinney's career when she was in town working in "Reckless." Whenever a newspaper man passed Slickem's shoe parlor, the bootblack would stop him and try to arrange for a personal interview with Miss McKinney.

Oscar and Slickem both work in pictures and it is as actors that they are jealous of each other. Oscar will tell you Slickem is a ham and Slickem will tell you the same thing about Oscar. One week, just to annoy Oscar, Paramount decided to borrow Slickem for a picture and to shine shoes at Oscar's stand.

THE AUDIENCE at the Hollywood premiere of "Waiting for Lefty" was very unusual. The opening night price to see this fine dramatic play of Communistic ideas was $5.50. Therefore the lower floor was occupied by movie stars and Pasadena society folks. There weren't any Communists sitting in the orchestra, for they didn't have that amount of money to toss away for seats.

It wasn't difficult to recognize the actors, representing taxi drivers, who were sprinkled in the audience. They were the fellows who weren't wearing tuxedos. It certainly was a mistake to charge $5.50, because the excitement which I am told prevailed at the New York opening at the conclusion of the play, didn't occur here. When the actors shouted "Strike! Strike!" no one on the lower floor joined the chorus.

• • • •

In fact, after "Waiting for Lefty," there was an indignation meeting of the wealthy subscribers of the Playhouse Theater in the lobby. They resented the fact that they supported the theater and had this type of dialogue thrown across the footlights into their faces.' There is a note in the program which reads: "The views implied and expressed by the author are his own and are presented at the Hollywood Playhouse because of their entertainment value and because of their current success at the Longacre Theater, New York."

Once an actor is a star in Hollywood he has to keep up the big front. Last week a former screen favorite, who has a difficult time getting small roles, had the water in his house turned off because he couldn't pay the bill. But he had a few bottles of champagne left in the cellar. He couldn't drink water so he drank champagne.

AAA Contracts Are Given Spur By Referendum

Unofficial Returns Show 6-1 Vote Favoring Wheat Control Program.

Capper and Representative Hope, Kansas Republicans, interpreted the referendum trend as a notice to Congress that the farmers want the program continued.

Chairman Smith of the Senate Agriculture Committee adopted the House farm group's revised AAA bill to submit to the Senate. Many of the provisions which caused its rejection in the Senate last year were believed by Smith to have been changed sufficiently to remove much opposition.

Senator Capper, a supporter of the AAA program, said the wheat referendum vote Saturday "ought to convince Congress that the wheat program has been helpful and that the wheat farmers undoubtedly are for it."

Denies Controversy.

Expressing a belief the result "will have a moral effect on the passage of the AAA amendments," Representative Hope, ranking Republican on the House Agriculture Committee said that with few exceptions those amendments affecting the wheat program were "not controversial."

"In Kansas," Hope said, "I saw no political effect in the referendum. The program has been participated in by Republicans and Democrats alike."

The processing tax on cotton which has been assailed by textile manufacturers was not involved in the pending AAA amendments.

At the farm administration, officials were working on forms of the new wheat contracts for the four years, 1936 to 1939 inclusive, with optional provisions for a referendum on the question of continuing it from year to year.

Bases to Remain Same.

George E. Farrell, director of the grain division, said the "bases for grain acreage and production allotments will remain the same, the years 1930-32 for acreage and 1928-32 for production." He added: "This means that new contracts can be signed without having to do over again the job of working out the allotments."

Minor adjustments, Farrell said, would be worked out within counties, the amount to be determined each year by Secretary Wallace. The contracts would limit adjustments to 25 per cent of the base acreage. The present contract calls for a possible 20 per cent reduction but the most asked for was 15 per cent in 1934.

Benefit payments would be determined at the beginning of each marketing year. Local county wheat production control associations will administer the proposed program.

As revised, the AAA bill would give Wallace discretionary power to impose licenses on handlers of wool, mohair, fruits and vegetables in the non-basic commodity group, and upon processors of milk and its products, tobacco and sugar beets in the basic group.

The licensing authority was said by the AAA to be intended to facilitate marketing arrangements worked out co-operatively among growers, processors and handlers.

National Park For W. Virginia Given Impetus

U. S. Forester Invited to Tour Area to Decide Whether It Meets Needs.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 26.—Meeting for the first time since the project was initiated a week ago by Representative Jennings Randolph, of this district, who named an Eastern panhandle committee, several definite moves toward establishing a natoinal park in the mountainous area of western Berkeley and southwestern Morgan County, to include Spruce Pine Hollow, Meadow Branch and nearby unfarmable areas totaling probably 70,000 acres of land, were made last night at the meeting of the National Park area committee, with County Agent W. N. McClung as its chairman.

Committees from Martinsburg Kiwanis Club, Berkeley Springs Kiwanis and Chamber of Commerce, and from other civic groups have been at work on the saving of Spruce Pine Hollow tract for some time.

To secure a definite indication from the United States Park Service as to whether the proposed area meets with Federal requirements, a forester from the National Park Service will be invited here. He will be taken on a one-day tour of the area by Messrs. Tull Whitacre, game protector Charles Scott, of Berkeley Springs, and W. N. McClung.

If the forester finds that the tract meets with Federal requirements, the group will begin assembling from the assessor's books and survey maps the data as to land owners, assessed valuation of the land embraced in the tract and other necessary information.

The Federal Government will pay around $3 an acre for land for such parks, it was stated at the meeting.

It was explained that the United States Park and Forestry Services are interested only in establishing parks where acreages in excess of 50,000 are available. It was noted too that State lines make no difference in the Federal parks, and that the proposed area might well extend southwestward into Virginia, possibly tying into the George Washington National Forest or the Monongahela National Forest.

The area in Berkeley-Morgan counties around Meadow Branch is full of scenic attractions it was noted by those most familiar with it. An artificial lake, of an estimated 500 acres, can be built easily with a small amount of damming.

The committee named by Representative Randolph is: Chairman, McClung; vice chairman, Charles Scott, of Morgan County; M. S. Eckerd, of Berkeley; H. F. Householder, Vernon Johnson and Sam Harmison, of Morgan; A. M. Staubly, C. T. Whitacre, Robert Peery, King Masters and F. L. Downey, of Berkeley.

Dorothy Shipley Honored.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 26.—Miss Dorothy Shipley was named president of the Berkeley Springs High School Alumni Association at the annual meeting Friday night, and Frank Willard was named secretary-treasurer.

Seven Forced to Flee As Fire Sweeps House

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Neighbors, Mrs. McClelland Freeman and Elwood Slater, discovered the fire and aroused the occupants.

Slater and Heffner carried the children to safety and assisted Harry Gossert, an aged man who lived with the Heffner family, from the burning structure. Mont Alto and Waynesboro firemen were called.

Politics And Religion.

"There is no defense against reproach," Addison once said, "except obscurity." As Father Coughlin has proved, neither the layman nor the priest can become a political crusader without entering into rough and tumble scraps where epithets are likely to be substituted for logic and insinuations for sound reasoning. Especially is this true when the ecclesiastical politician becomes hysterical through a false conception of his own wisdom.

In view of the intemperate outbursts from the radio priest following the bonus veto, it is not surprising that he should be once more rebuked by Cardinal O'Connell, dean of the Roman Catholic hierarchy in the United States. While the Archbishop of Boston has no jurisdiction over Father Coughlin, the indignation which he has expressed over the rabble-rousing tactics of the priest must be shared by thousands of Catholics who are less inclined to denounce a wearer of the cloth.

Further disparagement of Father Coughlin's tactics is expressed in a communication from former Representative Conry, which is printed in our letter columns today. The sanctimonious advocacy of economic nostrums by one whose chief claim to leadership is an emotional voice and an ecclesiastical position is certain to arouse resentment among churchmen as well as the general public; for the radio priest is rudely ignoring the traditional line between religion and politics in this country. From that point alone the consequences of his "movement" may be extremely unpleasant. The controversy which is developing around him raises a serious question as to whether any church should permit its ordained representatives to indulge in demagogic campaigns that have little if any relation to their religious functions.

The issue is not one of free speech, but of using ecclesiastical offices for political purposes. No doubt thousands of Catholics think Father Coughlin should abandon the ways of the demagogue or step out of his religious duties. So long as he continues his present course there is grave danger of arousing, even among groups within the church he is supposed to serve, bitter antagonism which is entirely foreign to the spirit of religion.

Control Of Conventions.

As the capital city of the Nation, Washington has peculiar advantages and peculiar obligations. As to the first, there are the many national shrines and monuments, the museums and libraries, to say nothing of the vast Federal plant with its wealth of imposing architecture and careful landscaping. Of the obligations, the most outstanding is that of playing host to any and all citizens who make pilgrimages to the seat of their national Government.

As every resident must know by this time, thousands of members of a fraternal order and their families are about to descend on the city for a mammoth convention. There is naturally rejoicing because of the great sums of money they are expected to spend in a holiday mood. And there is equal enthusiasm for the parade and pageantry that their program will include. This is properly the convention city of America. Most Washingtonians are inclined to say, "Let all convene who will, and the more the merrier."

This attitude, however, is to a large extent counterbalanced by a deep irritation at the laxity of local authority in safeguarding the interests of the entire city. There is the matter of the reviewing stands and, more recently, of the stringent traffic restrictions.

Pedestrian traffic has been seriously inconvenienced by the unsightly mass of carpentry on Pennsylvania avenue along Lafayette square and in front of the White House, the Treasury and State Department. Lawns have been defaced, the front of the President's home has been littered with debris (there will be tons more when the stands are occupied), and—most distasteful—the grace and dignity of the entire Executive Mansion neighborhood has been rudely jarred.

Admittedly, the President traditionally reviews the inaugural parade from that spot. But a certain distinction may be drawn between a presidential inaugural and the jamboree of a fraternal order. If parades are necessary to conventions, they might be so routed as not to disfigure for weeks the very heart of the city. Permanent reviewing stands placed along broad Constitution avenue could be arranged.

In the imposition of a 24-hour parking ban upon the busiest section of the city, the authorities seem to have been especially inconsiderate of local residents. While making these elaborate preparations to accommodate the visitors, Traffic Director Van Duzer admits that he does not know how thousands of residents in the area affected will meet the problem thus thrust upon them. Of course, the streets in question will be jammed during the convention. It nevertheless appears that the balance between local and transient interests has been rather carelessly upset.

For this the convention directors are not to blame. What seems to be necessary is more adequate planning by which sudden disruption of the city's normal routine could be avoided. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission is meticulous in planning the growth of the city. A little more attention to the esthetic side of the convention probably would be in order.

Sound Advice On Banking.

In his address of Saturday night, explaining and defending the provisions of the Administration banking bill, Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board rightly asserted that the issue "narrows down largely to a question of the composition of the controlling body." He favors the proposal contained in the House bill which would centralize monetary and credit powers in the hands of a committee consisting of the Federal Reserve Board, with five representatives of the Federal Reserve Banks acting in a purely advisory capacity. However, Governor Eccles' statement that he does not "wish to be dogmatic about how this body shall be constituted," is a very plain hint that he would not reject compromise proposals designed to give the Federal Reserve Banks more influence in the determination of credit policies.

During the past week, for instance, a number of leading bankers who are members of the Federal advisory council, appeared before the Senate sub-committee on banking to urge various changes in the Administration bill along lines suggested in a recent council report to the Federal Reserve Board. Among the most important of the controversial issues discussed in the report is that relating to the conduct of open market policy—that is, the purchase and sale of Government securities by the Federal Reserve Banks with a view to expanding or decreasing the volume of member bank reserves and thus influencing the amount of credit extended.

The Advisory Council recommends that the open market committee shall consist of five members of the Federal Reserve Board and four governors selected by the Federal Reserve Banks. As an alternative to the proposal contained in the House bill the council's suggestion may provide a solution of a difficult question that will be acceptable to all concerned. As Governor Eccles says, the "all important thing is to place responsibility in a clearly defined body." Certainly those who are opposed to any change in the present method of conducting open market operations take an untenable position. So long as the individual Federal Reserve Banks are permitted to participate or not as they choose in open market operations, intelligent and consistent policies can not be formulated and carried out.

The Advisory Council also recommends a change in the composition of the board designed to strengthen its independent status by removing the two ex-officio members and reducing the number of appointive members to five. As Winthrop W. Aldrich, a member of the council, pointed out: "The Reserve Board would become less subject to political pressure and less disposed to use its powers for financing budget deficits if these two ex-officio memberships are terminated. Reduction of the number of appointive members was urged because "on certain critical occasions the vote of the board has been evenly divided, resulting in inaction and indecision."

If the Administration is primarily interested, as alleged, in clarifying the law and guarding against future emergencies by eliminating legislative obstacles to discretionary action, it can not seriously object to changes designed to remove the Reserve Board from the danger of political domination and to preserve a measure of autonomy for the Federal Reserve Banks without giving the latter an opportunity to checkmate the policies of the board. Under existing conditions, there is too much pulling and hauling by both the Government and the banks to obtain power and control. What is needed is harmonious and cooperative action by all in the interest of the public with due regard for private interests, too.

More stress should be placed upon the personal qualifications of men at the head of large banks and more thought should be given to the problem of selecting highly competent men as members of the Federal Reserve Board, without regard to their political affiliations. There would then be less need of relying upon laws to insure efficient administration, and a great deal less fear that larger discretionary powers for those in control of credit policy will lead to abuse.

A Negro Jury In Fairfax.

An echo of the Supreme Court's decision in the Scottsboro case was heard in Fairfax County when the court summoned a special grand jury composed entirely of Negroes to hear charges against two colored persons. It is the first time in the history of the county that such procedure has been ordered, although more than 50 years ago some Negroes served on a trial jury. Yesterday's jury promptly returned the indictments sought by the Commonwealth attorney.

This is commendable recognition of an intricate problem. Whether it is the correct solution is debatable. Instead of eliminating racial lines within the courts, this procedure tends to accentuate them. Pursuing the court's logic, if the case had involved only white persons, Negroes would have been excluded from the grand jury. Or, again, if the charges had been placed against persons of foreign birth and background would all native-born citizens have been dismissed from the panel?

It is not the whole battle, but it is a good start. Now that the justice of admitting Negroes to jury service is recognized it should not be difficult to work out a plan whereby color lines would be completely ignored in selecting juries. Fairfax County is to be congratulated.

Fruits Of An Experiment.

In spite of shrinking exports, distress among textile mills and an increasing drain upon the Treasury, the Administration has decided to continue its cotton program another year. When the crop control policy was first launched the President emphatically announced that he would be first to urge its modification when evidence of failure became apparent. The dire consequences of the Bankhead act and the 12-cent loan on cotton are now generally recognized. But the President's advisers and congressional leaders apparently have decided that it would be too painful to turn back.

Crop control is still popular with farmers, as the poll among wheat growers has proved. Especially in the cotton belt the AAA is synonymous with higher prices and benefit checks. As yet the farmers are not much concerned over the drop in cotton exports, amounting to 3,044,240 bales in the nine months ending with March. For the Government is lending them 12 cents per pound on cotton, and if they are unable to sell it for more than that amount they can let the Treasury take the loss. It is significant that loans under this liberal arrangement have increased rapidly in recent months.

During the first stages of the cotton program the surplus which had been accumulated under the Farm Board regime was substantially reduced. Now the world supply of American cotton is increasing again in spite of the drastic acreage curtailment under the Bankhead law. Consumption as well as production has declined. The processing tax has induced the people to buy fewer cotton goods. High prices for the American fiber have encouraged other countries to expand their output and foreign mills to buy the cheaper crops of Egypt, India and Brazil. The United States is being progressively squeezed out of the world cotton market, partly because of legislative handicaps imposed on the domestic industry.

Under ordinary conditions the farmer would vigorously protest against this shrinkage in his market. But the Government is absorbing all the losses. Cotton that should be en route to foreign mills is being held in warehouses as collateral for Federal loans. The AAA now controls far more cotton than did the Farm Board. Loans have been made on 4,387,000 bales, in addition to cotton previously accumulated and now held in pools. If the price falls below the 12-cent loan figure, the Government will suffer substantial losses. No doubt that has been a large factor in the decision to peg the price of the new crop, providing the Bankhead act is extended. But if world production continues to expand and the consumption of American cotton to fall, this will merely postpone the agony of ultimate adjustment.

Instead of facing these disagreeable facts, the AAA has decided to continue on its course of expediency. Farmers would be disappointed if the artificial benefits flowing into their pockets should be reduced, and taxpayers would grumble, as they did at the Farm Board, if a move toward competitive cotton prices should expose huge governmental losses. So the Administration refuses to recognize the shortcomings of its experiment. It clings to the policy that is temporarily popular in spite of threatened disaster for a great American industry. The objective attitude of the experimenter is dropped in favor of opportunistic defense of a policy that becomes increasingly untenable.

Judges are a heartless lot. The other day one virtually ruined a honeymoon by sending the bridegroom to jail 30 days for beating up the bride.

"What will we do for the younger generation?" an editor wants to know. Judging from the past, we'll do anything the younger generation wants done.

With prices of food continually advancing, it's about time some enterprising manufacturer placed on the market a refrigerator equipped with a time-lock.

Another advantage in owning a home is that you have something to mortgage when you want to buy an automobile.

For The Good Of The Movies.

From the Omaha World-Herald.

Representative Pettengill, of Indiana, has introduced into the Congress a bill which would outlaw "block-booking" by the producers of motion pictures. This is the trade custom by which a motion picture exhibitor is compelled, when he leases the movies made by one company's stars, to take also the mediocre productions of that company. The theater man is given little or no choice, but must lease and show dozens of indifferent films in order to be sure of obtaining those of wide popular appeal.

One is persuaded that the producers themselves would gain in the end if block-booking were forbidden. They would be spurred to make pictures which would win favor on a competitive basis, and the more good pictures they produced, the more pictures the public would pay to see. The smaller, "independent" producers would find new markets opened to them, and would be encouraged to better efforts. In any field of human activity the merit system, in the long run, produces the best results all around. Movie monopoly, fed by block-booking which holds the exhibitor in thrall, sustains cheap and tawdry films and drives the public away from the theaters.

Housing Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As one who has had some experience in building and developing beauty about buildings, I feel qualified to express an opinion on this subject.

The point I have in mind is that section immediately surrounding the Capitol. If we take those two squares north of the main thoroughfare, Constitution avenue, and east of John Marshall place as an example, and build large two-story, high-roomed structures, with large front yards for trees and shrubbery and a few tennis courts along with a small gymnasium and swimming pool and begin construction of these houses at once, it would be a very suitable and timely venture as a basis for further civic development of Washington.

These would be income producers for the United States Government and furnish conveniences in living quarters for such people as Senators, Representatives and other responsible persons, such as executives of the various governmental divisions.

There are plenty of private investors who would normally be glad to purchase 3 per cent bonds on such a development when title to the land is made secure by long-term lease or purchase by either agreement by two parties or by condemnation proceedings of the courts with the assistance of a well-qualified commission for such purpose.

I trust that you will publish this plan in order that others may have opportunity for comment and suggestions.

The Cause Of A Tragedy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In reference to the tragic plane wreck in which our splendid Senator Cutting and half a dozen other people lost their lives, I would like to say that here in this Southwestern country, censure for the tragedy seems to rest with the ground crew who sent the plane forward into the fog, when it couldn't land in Kansas City, instead of ordering it back to Wichita, Kans., where there was no fog.

If the pilot had chosen to disobey the order and had driven back instead of forward, he would probably have lost his job, but isn't that better than losing his life and the possible loss or crippling of all his passengers? It seems to me if the company is particular to pick competent help, whose training, experience and judgment are unusually fine and above reproach, as they should be when responsible for so many precious lives, why should not that company allow the pilot to use his own judgment about landing instead of restricting him too closely?

The Fox Fable.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I noticed in last Sunday's paper that Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of Chase National Bank, was before the Senate Banking Committee giving advice and warnings against any actions taken by the Government in regard to money plans, forcing one to read between the lines, "better leave the money business to us Wall Street manipulators."

This reminds one of the old fable, "The foxes said, oh, you silly farmers, why lock the hen house doors—let the chickens roost on the fences, we will take care of the chickens, we understand the chicken business."

If the Senate Banking Committee needs advising, surely there are financiers without an ax to grind.

No, No, No!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Will you kindly solve two or three perplexing questions that bother me much: Given the same premises, should not all right-thinking, logical, unbiased, unprejudiced reasoning arrive at the same conclusion?

If the Supreme Court justices vote 5 to 4 on a question, is the majority right, and therefore good, and the minority wrong, and therefore evil?

Should not all decisions of the Supreme Court be unanimous?

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have always been impressed by the wonderful column in your paper headed "This Business of Living," by Mary Haworth, but especially and deeply so by her recent replies to "Unemployed" and "Real Man."

Mary Haworth displays such sensitive understanding of the very soul of one and gives such wonderfully wise and helpful suggestions that I feel every one who reads her column must profit thereby though not involved, and that The Post should be commended for giving its readers the human uplift of such a column.

Dux Femina?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

By all the laws of nature, theology and civilization, women should rule. Women are more efficient, more charitable; they sponsor religion and the fine arts. The stupid rule of the politicians in the country should give place to a woman President.

The time has come for an empire builder. Under the rule of a strong woman, built somewhat upon the lines of Catherine the Great, this country may see the last of disgusting, inadequate democracy. Here is the right word at the right time!

Father Coughlin And Father McGlynn.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Cardinal O'Connell is an outstanding figure of the church not alone in America but universally.

Brief extracts from his address in Boston received front page attention in the metropolitan press. The cardinal's accomplishments as scholar, ecclesiast, author and orator are acclaimed by laymen and church men alike. He exemplifies Eliot's idea of an orator, who appeals to the reason, but abstains from arousing the emotions. It is his deep insight into truth which gives value to his testimony.

Father Coughlin reached the end of his career as a social rebel at the Madison Square Garden last Wednesday night. His speech fell flat. Few knew the reason why, but he was dismayed at what he saw, unseen to all others present.

While delivering his engineturned sentences and flawless phrases, his denunciation of bankers, softened with sobs for the poor, his fervor diminished as his eyes shifted uneasily from floor to roof. His tension relaxed as his vision was haunted by the specter of another priest who had appeared in the same Garden some 50 years before, with the same promise that he would reform the world and abolish all poverty.

The ghost of Father McGlynn destroyed Father Coughlin.

Father McGlynn had energy and eloquence equal to the modern crusader, and was zealous in expounding his single-tax theory before his Anti-Poverty Society. He believed that Henry George would redistribute the wealth of the world, even as Huey Long would do today. McGlynn and George were products of the panic of 1873, precisely as Coughlin and Long are products of the recent depression.

Government by threat was a failure 50 years ago, as it is today. When the Senate vote on the World Court was taken, opponents of the President were jubilant. Father Coughlin was credited with the result. As a matter of fact, not a single senatorial vote on the World Court offered evidence of bearing the Detroit tag. It is conclusive that the bonus bill vote sustaining the President was equally free from radio influence.

This senatorial support of the President, indicating decisive rejection of Father Coughlin, the scholastic chastisement of Cardinal O'Connell, and, above all, that spectral appearance of Father McGlynn in Madison Square Garden, all combine to mark the end of that restless spirit, whose intentions were good, but whose methods were bad, who seemed unable to realize that all the time he was devoting to social reform he was taking from his priestly duties, that to acquire fleeting success in this world he would abandon eternal happiness in the next, and that the very success of his worldly efforts meant the failure of his spiritual devotions regardless of will to the contrary.

All members o fthe church pray that Father Coughlin may be spared the dismal experience of Father McGlynn.

TALK about coincidences!

Here is a coincidence of coincidences.

We were talking about coincidences, you know, in Saturday's Column. We were presenting the Audrey Wurdemann Coincidence, the Great Pulitzer Poetry Prize Mystery.

We recalled the publisher's statement that the prize-winning "Bright Ambush" (1935) was its author's first book of verse. Then we made public a correspondent's discovery of a book of verses underneath a shelf in the Library of Congress, "The House of Silk" (1927)—the title-page of which bore the strange words "By Audrey Wurdemann."

Could there be two poetical Audrey Wurdemanns?

Our correspondent didn't believe in coincidences like that.

Well, he'd better believe in a coincident like this. For, if he doubts it, he'll be doubting the word of The Post-Impressionist.

Here it is:

Right now, as we sit down to prepare the current column—the column next following Saturday's coincidence column—we find on our desk two appeals from two unconnected Washingtonians, each situate in a separate district of the District (the first has an address in the Northwest, the second blows Southeasterly) and each dealing with a coffee conundrum and a restaurant racket.

One, after "Dear Post-Impressionisting" us, says:

"I need a little help. First, I thought I would address myself to Mary Haworth but, somehow or other, it does not seem to me that this is just her kind of problem. This trouble of mine concerns milk, by which I mean cow's milk—in fact, hot milk. It has nothing to do with the milk of human kindness on which Miss Haworth spends so much time.

"This is my grief: Day after day, week after week, and month after month, I go to luncheon at a hotel or restaurant. I used to take the cream they serve with their coffee. But my doctor says I must not. I weigh too much in fact.

"However, I have one awful time to get hot milk.

"Knowing from experience how hard it is to get it, I always take the trouble to make it clear to the waiter. I say, 'Coffee with hot milk—no cream.'

"Yet, nineteen times out of twenty, they bring me cream, and they do not bring me milk. Making it clear does not make it clear at all.

"What do you suggest?

"Had I better give up the hot milk idea for the peace of mind I would acquire, or should I keep on struggling—struggling? Are you able to think of any way by which I can, with some degree of politeness, sufficiently impress the waiter that I mean what I say when I order hot milk, and that I do not want any cream?

"The thing is getting on my nerves. Desperation is setting in. Of course, the worry helps to reduce me, and that is an offset. But I believe desperation will be worse for my nerves than the cream would be. ANXIOUS."

Now for his fellow-sufferer. This one also felt some hesitancy in addressing us, but this one also overcame it.

"I suppose it is a certain geniality about your column which prompts me to write to you instead of the editor. He might not think my problem of any social, political or economic importance—and so ignore it. Moreover, I have been told that he is terribly overworked and that you are not."

We aren't quite too toil-tired to miss the wasp in those preserves. But we are too work-weary to resent it.

"Anyway," we magnanimously permit this correspondent to continue, "I have a serious complaint to make against Washington restaurants. My trouble is coffee. I like to drink it hot and fresh. I do not like it with my meals. I even like it with my dessert, if I can afford one.

"But I go into restaurants and order coffee regularly, and regularly I also tell them to bring it after the meal and not with it or before it, but after it, is what I tell them. Well, with almost absolute regularity and inevitably the coffee appears alongside my modest hamburger.

"I don't know what you can do to help me, but, for goodness' sakes, tell me something. You are The Post-Impressionist. Let me have your impression of how I can postpone my coffee.

"A FRIEND OF REX TUGWELL."

There you are. Like the Walrus and the Carpenter, "we deeply sympathize"—but we can't help. For (a third coincidence) we are hopelessly in a similar boat. When we order a ham-sandwich, we are always served a sandwich of ham-and-lettuce.

Thinking Again.

"I SEE where Mrs. Roosevelt's thinking again," said Pete, the taxi driver. "I guess she thinks pretty much all the time, don't you? I wish my little woman was like that. That's my wife; I call her the little woman. Funny thing, she ain't little, either. She's just as big as I am. I'll say she is.

"Only this morning I says to her, I says, 'Why don't you think like Mrs. Roosevelt? That's what she's trying to get you women to doing,' I says, 'that's the reason she's always thinking because on account of her being the First Lady of the land she figures if she keps on thinking the other women will start to thinking, too.'

"'Course, I didn't mean I wanted her to think the same things Mrs. Roosevelt thinks when I says think 'like' her, but what I meant was that she ought to think also. That's what I meant, 'also,' not 'like.'

* * * *

"Well, sir, you should a seen the little woman flare up. She says, 'You'd be surprised how much I think, how much I think about you, too.' Ho, ho! that's a good one. You know, I bet women do think a lot when you don't know they're thinking.

"Anyways, the little woman, she says, 'What's Mrs. Roosevelt thinking about now?'

And I says "She's thinking about having Federal housewives, that's what she's thinking about. She wants women to get in on some of the $4,000,000,000 and she says one way for them to get it on it is to be a Federal housewife. Every community would have a Federal housewife like it has a fire department. Then every time a housewife lets her housewife problems get the best of her or maybe she was no good at the business of housewifing in the first place, well she would just call for the Federal housewife who would come in and tell her how to run things. You see, she would be Government trained. She would know all about how to arrange your furniture, how to arrange the furniture for conversational groups and how for big parties, she would know how to light an instantaneous heater and everything that a housewife should know on account of having been trained by the Government.

"'Maybe,' I says, 'every home would have a little box, like a fire alarm box, or maybe there would just be one at every corner. Then when you wanted the Federal housewife you'd just go to the box and pull the lever and wait there till the Federal housewife come a running and you would just say 'It's my house, lady, that's in trouble.'

* * * *

"Perhaps, I wouldn't have been so impressed and wouldn't said anything to the little woman except Mrs. Roosevelt's proposing this put into my mind how she's always thinking. I remember once how on the radio she told everybody how to roast hot dogs out in the country without burning the fingers. The thing to do, she says, was to take a little stick and stick the little stick in the hot dog and hold it over the fire. Naturally it would be the little stick and the hot dog that would get burned this way instead of the hot dog and the fingers.

"In the olden times primitive peoples who didn't know any better, used to roast hot dogs by holding the hot dog over the fire with their fingers and naturally their fingers were burnt all the time, well not all the time, but as much as they roasted hot dogs.

"I think it's amazing, don't you, how people advance?

* * * *

"And the more I got to thinking about this advance of people the more I thought, well, there must be a life after death. I figures it this way. Nature ain't doing nothing purposeless. What I mean is that nature has a purpose for everything it does. You take the trees, well, nature has a purpose in growing them, in growing flowers. Everything it does it intends something definite.

"Well, now why would it develop people from the point of roasting hot dogs with their fingers and getting their fingers burnt to the point of roasting them with little sticks so the fingers wouldn't get burnt, unless it had some purpose for the people? To spend millions of years perparing people for the proper roasting of hot dogs and then letting them die, the people I mean, would be foolish.

"And I don't believe nature is foolish. You can say what you want to, Mrs. Roosevelt is what you call provocative. She sho do make you think, don't she?

"Well, here's where you get out."

"Today's Dr. Lewis' birthday!"

Meeting In Buenos Aires

By Peter Kihss.

PROSPERITY, according to the Pan-American nations, can only be attained when the world settles down to free and easy trading. This has been their stated creed since the last great gathering of the Pan-American nations—in Montevideo in December, 1933. On that creed they have based considerable action during the last year and a half.

For the Latin American nations, free trade has always been a thing to be desired. Few produce any of the manufactured goods they need. Most produce raw materials in which they have no trade assuring monopoly. In such economies, protectionist tariffs simply do not fit. As such raw material nations buy without the reluctance imposed by towering tariffs on imports, so they wish to sell without that handicap abroad.

So, until exchange difficulties caused by a mad world's sudden dash for economic autarchy forced them into novel restrictions to uphold their currencies, the Latin American nations were exemplary from the free trade point of view.

This perhaps is why Secretary of State Cordell Hull has hit it off so well with his Latin American neighbors. Hull himself being a leading exponent of the doctrine: "As ye trade, so shall ye prosper."

* * * *

AT Montevideo in 1933, Secretary Hull joined with the delegates of 20 other American nations in calling for freer trade as the key to the depression-ending puzzle. The nations then pledged themselves to seek freer trade by every possible means.

They said, for one thing, that they would act to negotiate bilateral trade treaties that would interlock in a general battering ram to crash down high tariffs everywhere. Many have so acted. There have been trade agreements between Argentina and Brazil; Argentina and Chile; Chile and Peru; Colombia and Venezuela, among others. The United States has signed accords with Cuba, Brazil and Haiti.

Some have lowered ther own tariffs by unilateral action. Brazil and Cuba last year wrote new tariff laws, effecting considerable downward changes in duties. Panama's revision eliminated import duties on 600 commodities.

Now, harmonizing with these efforts and promises, a commercial conference began yesterday in Buenos Aires. Representatives of all 21 Pan American nations will attend. Called by a Montevideo resolution, the new conference jibes with the moves to freer trade. True, it will not even discuss sweeping away the tariff hurdles—that has been left to a later meeting in San tiago, Chile. But it will strive to brush away the pebbles and stones of port charges and harbor restrictions and the general bureaucratic regulations that are sometimes almost as effective in slowing down commerce.

* * * *

THE new conference will not be dramatic, despite the fact that it will open with the handclasps of two presidents, Augustin Justo of Argentina and Getulio Vargas of Brazil, while squadrons of blue-jacketed and steel-helmeted cavalry parade outside Buenos Aires' beautiful white city hall.

No morning coats and striped pants will clothe the 100-odd delegates during their technical discussions. Dressed plainly as business men, they will talk of business problems. According to the agenda, they will consider:

1. Port and clearance facilities for ships and aircraft.
2. Reduction of customs house duties and simplification of customs house procedure.
3. Co-ordination of sanitary police regulations.
4. Uniform classification of merchandise.
5. Arbitration of commercial disputes.
6. Repression of smuggling.
7. Improvement of communications by land, sea, river and air.
8. Increase in tourist traffic.

"The purpose," Foreign Minister Carlos Saavedra Lamas of Argentina wrote last August when he invited the other nations to attend the parley, "is to get rid of the things that clog navigation and commerce among the American nations, to foster and facilitate instead those economic relations which are basic in the solidarity of States."

* * * *

TWELVE specific plans to smooth the path of trade have been proposed by the Argentine foreign office. They have been embraced in draft conventions and recommendations which will be offered to the conference for adoption.

On shipping, they urge that harbor charges cover merely the expense of services, being stripped of any tax aspects. National and international commissions would supervise these charges.

Merchandise would be uniformly classified in tariff schedules, along lines of a 1931 code sponsored by the League of Nations.

Customs officers would work under uniform laws. They would consider, for example, only the weight of merchandise without its wrappings when levying tariff duties by weight. And when levying duties ad valorem, they would calculate the value by taking the cost at the first port and adding only the service charges up to their own warehouse. Changes in duties would have to be published at least 30 days in advance.

Sanitary inspectors would have free access to plantations in each country, the nations agreeing to cooperate in watching out for parasites.

Coast guards would co-operate in fighting the contraband trade, now estimated to amount to $250,000,000 annually in the Americas. Each nation would "obligate itself to prevent the accumulation or storage near its frontiers of goods which might be smuggled."

* * * *

ONE novel idea, to encourage shipping in every American nation, would allow each to designate two ships flying its flag which could enter all other American ports without having to pay harbor duties or other charges on navigation.

On railroad traffic, the nations would set up national and international commissions to make their regulations uniform. On aerial traffic each would refrain from levying any tax on planes flying over its territory, collecting only the necessary service charges at landing fields. At the same time, the nations would centralize and distribute meteorological information and radio services for airplanes.

Another agreement would finally set up the much-sought Pan-American passport, good for six months, its visas free. Another would define an immigrant plainly and conclusively as a person who enters a nation with the intention of going to work there for a living.

And, finally, there is the same pious declaration that all Pan-American conferences adopt. Again, the newspapers will be urged to print more stories about the American nations, to spread "knowledge of the potential wealth of the continent."

Within the last few weeks the Pan-American Union's governing board has added commercial arbitration to the agenda. It is understood that means will be considered whereby private chambers of commerce would set up their own international systems of arbitrating disputes between business men in the different American nations.

* * * *

SOME of these proposals have already been accepted in principle, the tourist passaport, for one, commercial arbitration for another. Some are being seriously considered by the governments now. Thus, for example, Brazil's new tariff law late last year incorporated most of the league's suggestions for uniform naming of goods, and Peru, it is understood here, is about to follow suit.

Others will face objections and changes. On defining immigrants, the United States, it is authoritatively said, will point out that each nation faces special problems, and will recommend that the question be left to national rather than international settlement.

In addition, individual nations are arriving with their own projects. Chile will present a proposal to create Pan-American merchant marine, engaged exclusively in the coastwise trade. Chile also will bring up the subject of reconstructing the glacier-wrecked Trans-Andean railroad, a question it has vainly tried to persuade Argentina to settle since January, 1934.

Most of the delegates are experts rather than diplomats versed only in protocol niceties and pink tea patter. Accordingly, in the American delegation, the most important member is Spruille Braden, the New York financier and mining chieftain who handled economic questions for the United States delegation in Montevideo in 1933, although the chief delegate, by title, will be the Ambassador to Argentina, Alexander W. Weddell. The third American delegate will be the new Minsiter to Uruguay, Julius G. Lay.

* * * *

THE United States delegation also includes nine advisers, technical experts from the State and Commerce departments; a secretary, J. C. Holmes, who is assistant chief of the protocol division here, and an assistant secretary. State Department officials here say they expect considerable advance toward removing the technical obstacles to freer inter-American trade.

And as the conference swings into sessions, in many capitals of the hemisphere reciprocal tariff discussions are shaping the other half of the freer trade drive. In Washington, where three inter-American bilateral pacts have been concluded, like treaties are now being discussed with the five Central American nations. The 1933 treaty with Colombia is being revised in line with the reciprocal trade act passed by Congress since then. And most of the 11 other nations of the Pan-American Union have asked that trade negotiations be started here in their behalf as well.

This Wagging World.

THAT the world wags on is a fact detested by elderly bachelors, by owners of real estate, by college professors, by butlers, by Senators, by half the people, in short, you see pinned up and pictured in The New Yorker's humor-our drawings. And all the rest of us have pangs. Haven't you ever gone back to your home town and seen the meadow where you used to play three-old-cat rather queasily ornamented now by a filling station and six jerry-built bungalows?

Lift that phenomenon a couple of hundred degrees in scope and complexity, and you come to the questions which engage the all-star cast of "Leadership in a Changing World" (Harper, $2.50), edited by M. David Hoffman and Ruth Wanger. It is a symposium of world leaders, gentleman who grant at once that the world wags on, and who ask, probe, exhort and declare what can be done about it.

From Walter Lippmann setting up a base-line for the new social order; through Roosevelt, Stuart Chase, Edward Filene, Norman Thomas, Jose Ortega and so on stating the challenges to the old; through Wilson, MacDonald, Lenin, Mussolini, Briand, Gandhi, Sun Yat-Sen, Balfour and Mustafa Kemal defining such new trends in government as they see; through Brandeis, Frankfurter, John Dewey and Bertrand Russell calling on education to lead the way, through (this is an odd section) visions of the "nobler life" implied or seen by Sinclair Lewis, John Galsworthy, Thomas Mann, Tagore and Romain Rolland; all the way to the Hoover report on social trends in the United States and James Truslow Adams' famous statement of the "American Dream"—so runs this full, illuminating and thoroughly exciting book. Biographical remarks add value; some beautiful photographs by Margaret Bourke-White (skyscrapers, factories, water coming over great dams, etc.) give you that curious intoxication which comes from a view of the world to be.

And what do these leaders say? Spare me from filling out 30 columns. The names alone should give you a hint of the dozen directions, the dozen different perspectives. If they all come down to one point, it is this (the motto-quotation from an author unnamed)—"Modern man is in truth a citizen of the world, but he does not know it—and therein lies the tragedy of our times."

If you never see more of the book than these paragraphs, remember that.

* * * *

Sneerers at democracy seem to forget that we have kept one going here for 150 years, with the result that it is one of the very oldest stable governments in the world. And on the other hand, there is no use in the rest of us putting our heads in the sand. The market quotation of democracy has fallen in two hemispheres. What those threats are and how they can be met—not in descriptions of Nazis or Soviets or in manifestoes of political action, but in individual questions of wealth and health and social relations—make up the substance of this eloquent, sensible book by C. Delisle Burns: "Challenge to Democracy" (Norton, $2.50).

I can't remember a better one to give the lay-reader a strong sense of his value and responsibility in a pretty muddled time. Good passage: "The effort of the individual person to live at his full height, not cringing to circumstances nor being ashamed to fail, is the source of the power which the community now needs . . . The democratic tradition can not be maintained only on arguments against violence and authoritarianism. It is best understood and most keenly felt when men act together for a common cause. The habit of going out to help is the only escape from the fear and jealousy which obstruct what is best in common folk; and that habit is so widespread and so easily aroused to action among nobodies that they can save civilization."

Needless to say, these "nobodies" are all of us who have to tend to ourselves first, and find it a darned hard job.

But in each of us, in every slightest thing we do, there is implied our sense of the "community." And on that Mr. Burns bases his hope. Of it he says: "It is commoner in village public-houses than in fashionable clubs. It is stronger in the streets and shops than in drawing-rooms. It is most obvious in the common sense of ordinary folk carrying on together the ordinary business of living. And this sense of the community distinguishes all who have it from the others who can not really understand what is meant by public affairs or public policy. These others, even if they are ambassadors or duchesses, are childish in this matter. Public policy depends and always must depend upon those only who have the sense of community."

And thus in their minutiae the Germans actually do determine whether Hitler shall have a blood-purge or not, and the Russians whether or not Stalin shall decree a cosmetics ban, and the Americans—.

Well, it's funny how the world wags back. Do you remember the old medieval notion that private actions of men and women changed the stars in their courses?

the railway, joined the union, tried to study law but found that the combination of night-work with a course of studies was too much for him. So he set out to see the world.

He saw it. He sold farm machinery in Western Canada, worked a couple of years in Alaska as a miner, a fisherman, a longshoreman and a scow-hand, returning to Minneapolis in 1913, where he got a day job in a law office and attended a night law school. In 1915 he was admitted to the Minneapolis Bar and, after his marriage in 1917, went into State politics, being appointed assistant county attorney for Hennepin County in 1919. The following year he was unanimously appointed to the county attorneyship, a post which he held for ten years, or until his election as the first Farmer-Labor-Governor of any State in the Union.

His significance in the national scheme of politics rests primarily on the fact that he is a powerful figure in the region which must be held loyal to the New Deal if Roosevelt expects to carry through his policies of reform. There are, however, additional reasons why Olson must be considered carefully by the White House tacticians.

First, he is one of the two most radical respectable governors in the country—the other being Phil La Follette.

One Third Party That Is Intrenched.

Second, the Farmer-Labor Party is the one "third party" movement which is well-established and can serve as rallying ground for the left-wingers. It is not a flash in the pan like current depression panaceas, nor yet an untried force. It kept alive during the big post-war prosperity wave and developed rapidly as the depression wore on. In the 1934 elections there were Farmer-Labor movements in several States, including Oregon, and though none of these movements was especially strong they were all symptomatic of an ominous chemical change in the attitude of the electorate. Through the League for Independent Political Action, moreover, the party maintained a national alliance, reaching into the East. Howard Y. Williams, former executive secretary of the league—John Dewey is its chairman—became head of the Farmer-Labor Political Federation and presided over the Minnesota State convention in 1934, at which a politically embarrassing radical program was adopted. The Farmer-Labor Political Federation is actively at work trying to unite the various leaders of discontent behind a single leader. Olson is their candidate. And Olson, running on a platform like the 1934 platform of his party in Minnesota, might well obtain the support of the Socialist Party, as indicated by Norman Thomas' letter published in the New York Herald-Tribune on April 2, 1935.

Third, the party has put forward elements of a national program in Congress, through Representative Lundeen, a Farmer-Laborite, who is sponsor of the Lundeen Unemployment Insurance Bill, a measure which has the backing of nearly all the aggressive labor and radical groups. The Farmer-Laborites in Congress are the nucleus of the newly-formed "progressive bloc" of about fifty Representatives, who have agreed to support a number of measures somewhat more radical than those officially sponsored by the New Deal Administration.

Fourth, Olson is respectable—radical but respectable. People aren't investigating his income tax returns nor would they find anything if they did.

Fifth, Olson has had actual administrative experience and is a very practical politician.

Sixth, Olson represents a party with a reasonably well-rounded platform instead of a few catchwords or phrases. Much of the Farmer-Labor platform is incorporated in Coughlin's platform for his National Union for Social Justice. Farmer-Labor leaders in the agrarian States have been talking in a complimentary way about Coughlin for President in 1936. Olson is much more likely than Long is to attract liberal Catholic support.

The Farmer-Labor program in fact is a very well-considered device—politically speaking—to provide common ground for the various currents of dissent in the Mississippi Valley region. It includes an epic plank—now in actual operation—for the State to take over idle factories, operate them by the unemployed and distribute the products to the needy; a mortgage moratorium law which was sustained by the Supreme Court; a Huey Long exemption of homesteads valued up to $4,000 from taxation; a La Follette increase in graduated taxes on large incomes, gifts and inheritances; a central State reserve bank owned entirely by the State; an Ickes law to permit cities, towns and villages to own, operate and sell current from power and light plants; a Huey Long proposal for free text books; and the usual provisions for unemployment, sickness, accident and workmen's compensation insurance, maternity benefits and an "adequate old age pension."

This Program Shuns Monetary Panaceas.

One of the notable things about this program is that it avoids the monetary panaceas, so popular among certain groups which prefer inflation to reform. The other notable thing is that, while it offers itself as the protector of the small business man, it has thrown overboard the old trust-busting attitude. Instead of following Brandeis in denouncing the "curse of bigness," it proposes the nationalization or cooperativization of the big industries. It proposes trust-busting only when the big fellows compete with the little fellows and boasts that Minnesota has a higher chain-store tax than any other State.

The Farmer-Labor crowd stresses the cooperative element, probably because of the Scandinavian tradition of cooperation which has been transplanted to Minnesota. The platform of the party would, in fact, be regarded as mild and reasonable in the consumer-economy country of Sweden. At the same time, the Farmer-Labor leaders feel compelled to play down the element of socialization and nationalization, for the "radical" 1934 platform caused Olson and the party to lose ground with the more conservative Scandinavian voters of Minnesota.

The preamble to this platform said: "Palliative measures will continue to fail. Only a complete reorganization of the present social structure into a cooperative commonwealth will bring economic security and prevent a prolonged period of suffering among the people. We therefore declare that capitalism has failed and that immediate steps must be taken by the people to abolish capitalism in a peaceful and lawful manner, and that a new, sane, and just society must be established; a system in which all the natural resources, machinery of production, transportation, and communication shall be owned by the government and operated democratically for the benefit of all the people and not for the benefit of the few."

Olson happened to be in Washington—as was the Farmer-Labor Senator Shipstead—at the time the platform committee, largely influenced by Eastern doctrinaire radicals, did its work. Despite vigorous opposition from veteran Farmer-Laborites, the platform was put over and Olson accepted it, but, as the summer wore on, the party decided to suppress it. The Republicans and Democrats cited this preamble as a means of frightening the little business men and the farmers, so the party felt compelled to get out an official circular of explanation and, with typical shrewdness, circulated the explanation but not the platform.

In this connection, it is important to note that the Farmer-Labor Party is a party—in the accepted meaning—far more than it is a program. In other words, it represents the interests and views of a large body of men, and develops its proposals as it goes along, just like the other parties. For the Farmer-Labor Party grew out of the old Non-Partisan League movement in the Dakotas, as a combination of the mine and railroad workers and the farmers. Henrik Shipstead, the Farmer-Labor Senator whom one of the Hoover Administration tellingly compared to a large, nice Newfoundland dog where economics were concerned, was the league's candidate for Congressman in 1918, but was defeated. In 1920, he ran for Governor of Minnesota, and was again defeated. But the 1922 "swing-back" from the Harding "normalcy" victory of 1920, combined with the post-war slump in farm prices, sent Shipstead to the United States Senate, where he was joined a year later by Magnus Johnson. Both men ran under the new Farmer-Labor label.

This was the peak of the Farmer-Labor movement until the great depression began eating into traditional party lines—although it joined in the Third Party movement of 1924 which was led by the elder LaFollette.

While Olson was serving as county attorney of Hennepin County, which contains the City of Minneapolis, he joined the Farmer-Labor group. His prosecuting career was vigorous and he took a flyer for the governorship in 1934, but was beaten. He did not try again until 1930, when he was elected Governor with the help of a Democratic alliance. He was re-elected in 1932 and again in 1934, when, as a result of the "radical" platform, he made a relatively poor showing, running 35,000 votes behind Shipstead.

This was also due to the truckmen's strike of the summer of 1934, when he was caught between the extremely reactionary Citizens Alliance, with which he had fought before, and the increasingly radical and grim truckmen. The Citizens Alliance had made Minneapolis, with Los Angeles, one of the two great "open-shop" cities of America, and during the strike one of its officials protested to a large hospital in Minneapolis that it should make a rule not to accept wounded strikers. Olson finally declared martial law—the first time martial law had been declared to protect strikers in America—but the Communist groups, which had been making headway while the sun shone, denounced his action as a "Fascist strike-breaking move." For a time it looked as though this would cause Olson to lose the support of the more radical labor groups, but, after the strike had subsided, when the election was held, he kept his labor vote reasonably well, but lost among the more conservative Scandinavian farmers.

As Robles sees Olson.

A Friendly but Forceful Personality.

Olson is a red-headed, large-boned, big-chested, boyish-looking man, with a friendly but forceful personality. He prides himself on being a "practical" politician and on scorning political bunk. None of the political visiting firemen who descend on Washington talks to newspapermen with greater frankness, and he has the slightly cynical, direct manner that they like. After the campaign of 1934 he was asked by a group of Washington correspondents why he played down the radical program his party had adopted in the spring.

Birthday Gift For H. W. Taft

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

"OPINION Literary and Otherwise" is the title of a new book by the distinguished lawyer and publicist, member of a famous American family, every one of whom has attained eminence.

I write this article as a modest contribution to the celebration of his birthday—Henry W. Taft was born May 27, 1859.

During years spent in the successful practice of the law, he has always found time to cultivate the graces of life—the fine arts, literature, music, innumerable friendships. He has written a charming book on the art of conversation. He comes near to being an ideal American citizen.

* * * *

This little book of about 150 pages deals with a variety of themes; one chapter is devoted to the Genealogy of the Taft Family; another to Formal Autobiographies and Informal Exploitations, and the last three chapters I find particularly entertaining—Books, Literature-Drama-Music, and Observation on Old Age.

I wish I could share his tremendous enthusiasm for "Don Quixote." Of course I know it is a great classic, an immortal work, that has given delight to millions and will live as long as any other book. But I, myself, do not begin to enjoy it as I enjoy Dickens, or "The Anatomy of Melancholy," or Schopenhauer, or "The Three Musketeers." All of us have our blind sides, and there is no harm in admitting it.

* * * *

In the chapter on Old Age we have the candid reflections of a man who has lived long, has enjoyed and is enjoying life. He faces frankly the difficulties attendant upon any age, and quotes the worst that can be said from the great pessimists; two other quotations, one from an great writer in prose, one from an anonymous octogenarian in verse, appeal to me the most. From Cicero: "Just as I approve of the young man in whom there is a touch of age, so I approve of the old man in whom there is some of the flavor of youth. He who strives thus to mingle youthfulness and age may grow old in body, but old in spirit he will never be."

And here is the other:

"Age is a quality of the mind;
If you've left your dreams behind,
If hope is cold;
If you no longer look ahead;
If your ambition's fires are dead,
Then you are old.
But if in life you keep the zest,
If from life you draw the best;
If love you hold,
No matter how the years roll by;
No matter how the birthdays fly,
You are not old."

Barnsdall Corporation reports for the quarter ended March 31 net loss of $337,639 after interest, Federal taxes, depreciation, intangible development costs and other deductions. In the first quarter of 1934 the company reported net profit of $119,368, including profit of approximately $200,000 from the sale of a 7 per cent interest in the Great Lakes Pipe Line Co.

New York, May 26, (AP).—Sales of Safeway Stores (Pacific Coast) in 4 weeks ended May 18, amounted to $21,477,568 compared with $17,981,737 in the same period last year, an increase of 19.4 per cent.

New Lumber Business 50% Above Output

But Both Production and Orders Have Declined to January Level.

Shipments and new business at the lumber mills during the week ending May 18, 1935, as well as production, dropped to January levels. New business was, however, 50 per cent above production and shipments were 23 per cent above output. Compared with corresponding week of last year, production of reporting identical mills shows 25 per cent decline; shipments, gain of 12 per cent over those of last year; orders, gain of 12 per cent.

These comparisons are based upon telegraphic reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of 1,005 leading hardwood and softwood mills. In the week ended May 18, these produced 126,068,000 feet; shipped, 154,440,000 feet; booked orders of 189,319,000 feet. Revised figures for the preceding week were mills, 1,057; production, 139,286,000 feet; shipments, 196,458,000 feet; orders received, 214,932,000 feet.

All regions but southern cypress, northern pine and northeastern hardwoods reported orders above production during the week ended May 18. Total softwood orders were 53 per cent above output; hardwood orders, 18 per cent above hardwood production. All regions but West Coast Northern Pine and North Central Hardwoods reported orders above those of corresponding week of 1934. Total softwood orders were 10 per cent above those of last year's week; hardwood orders were 50 per cent above in similar comparison.

Unfilled orders on May 18, as reported by 1,251 mills were 866,727,000 feet and gross stocks, 4,386,731,000 feet. Identical softwood mills reported unfilled orders on May 18 as the equivalent of 29 days' average production and stocks of 132 days' production, compared with 28 days' and 152 days' on similar date of last year.

Forest products carloadings totaled 24,432 cars during the week ended May 11, 1935. This was 2,946 cars less than during the preceding week; 554 cars below similar week of 1934 and 4,199 cars above corresponding week of 1933.

Lumber orders reported for the week ended May 18, 1935, by 845 softwood mills totaled 177,706,000 feet; or 53 per cent above the production of the same mills. Shipments as reported for the same week were 143,450,000 feet, or 25 per cent above production. Production was 116,240,000 feet.

Wall Street Expects Flow Of Time Funds

Impetus to Recovery Is Seen Through Stimulation.

By Claude A. Jagger.
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, May 26 (AP).—Wall street hauled down its inflation storm warnings this week, but kept them close at hand.

The stock market gave evidence that its recent rise had not been generated altogether by buying to hedge against inflation, for shares ran into no flurries of disappointed selling when President Roosevelt scotched the $2,000,000,000 cash bonus bill and warned Congress against paper money inflation.

Indeed, security market analysts widely held that the action of the Senate in upholding the President's veto of the paper money bonus might well tend to clear the atmosphere of immediate inflation threats, and provide further impetus to recovery through stimulating the flow of long-term capital through bond financing.

Stocks worked irregularly higher during most of the week ended yesterday, with trading continuing at a fair pace. Bonds sagged moderately, in the aggregate, but low yield issues recovered partially with the blocking of the big cash bonus measure. Some conservative economists and investment experts continued to hound financial circles with warnings of the danger of eventual inflation through a vast expansion of credit which they said might well be generated as result of recent and contemplated banking legislation.

At the same time, it was pointed out by some banking authorities that the Federal Reserve still had its extraordinary power to check the excess loans for speculation, which was conferred upon it by the banking legislation of 1933. Federal Reserve Board experts were said to be studying the problem of using these powers when needed.

Another check to inflation, some banking authorities said, might well appear in increased taxation coming upon the heels of recovery, to pay off the borrowing incident to the huge emergency expenditures of the depression.

New York, May 26, (AP).—Directors of the Beechnut Packing Co. have declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the common and the regular quarterly payment of 75 cents, both payable July 1 to stock of record June 12. Three months ago a similar extra was paid.

Finance, Business, Economics

Better Business, Price Rise, to Come in Second Half, Purchasing Agents and Steel Men Predict; Wider Note of Excess Reserves Offsets Bonus Action.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, May 26.—A material improvement in business and moderate advances in prices of many commodities are expected by industrialists in a number of lines for the second half of this year.

The annual meetings here last week of the National Association of Purchasing Agents and the American Iron and Steel Institute furnished an excellent opportunity to gauge business sentiment. The views of many of those present at these meetings reflected an incipient "boom psychology." They expect the business indices to give concrete confirmation to their optimism after the adjournment of Congress and the consequent clarification of the legislative situation.

In the meanwhile, however, the actual trend of business activity is slightly downward. Furthermore, during the next few weeks a seasonal reaction is virtually certain, particularly as sales of new automobiles fall off with the coming of the summer months. It is now felt, however, that this summer's recession will be relatively quite moderate, and will probably culminate by the latter part of July when the work relief program and preparation for new automobile models will provide the basis for a new upturn. Hence, there is a widespread disposition to base new business plans upon prospects for the second half of the year, rather than the immediate trend.

Commodity Prices Round New Recovery Peak.

The general level of commodity prices, as measured by some sensitive weekly indices of price movements, touched a new peak since 1930 early in the week. The veto of the Patman bill had a restraining influence upon speculation in commodities. Furthermore, grain prices reacted sharply owing to improving weather conditions which indicate that the domestic wheat crop, despite the drouth in some parts of the Southwest, will exceed domestic requirements.

Prices changes for manufactured goods over the next few months will be influenced by the fate of the national industrial recovery act, which expires by June 16 unless new legislation is enacted before that date. Already, a number of reductions have been caused by abandonment of price filing systems. However, expanding demand is exercising a buoyant effect upon prices of a number of products, such as lead and zinc, gasoline, etc. Such basic materials available in limited supplies, purchasing agents gathered from all over the country here last week felt, will be most sensitive to the buoyant effects of more active business.

A growing number of business men are taking account in their calculations of the broad base for credit inflation that has been laid through the creation of an unprecedented volume of excess reserves. The renewed flight of capital from France, with consequent heavy exports of gold to the United States, is the latest factor adding to surplus bank reserves, which are already near the $2,400,000,000 mark.

The Treasury's present policy of allowing the national bank notes to remain in circulation, if continued after July 1, will cause a sudden rise in excess reserves of some $600,000,000 more, since on that date the prewar Government bonds with the circulation privilege are scheduled to be paid off with gold certificates. These bonds are almost entirely held by national banks, so that their repayment in this gives new excess reserves that will remain until the national bank notes are retired and have to be replaced with new Federal Reserve notes.

More Fundamental Than Bonus Issue.

The existence of such heavy and growing surplus balances is the factor that has made the response of security and commodity markets to the defeat of the Patman bonus bill so small.

These excess reserves will "take," and stimulate greater business activity and some price advances, either when banks make new loans and investments more freely, or when existing deposits are actually used to a greater extent. For the time being, the banks continue to refrain from making new loans and investments in any significant volume. Reporting member banks of the Federal Reserve System since the first of the year have increased "all other loans," comprising commercial advances, by only $90,000,000. Their holdings of Government and other bonds rose by $269,000,000. On the other hand, time and demand deposits expanded by fully $1,270,000,000, resulting almost entirely from Government spending.

However, as Gov. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, pointed out to Senator Couzens, a change in this situation may occur at any time. It may be brought about, in the first place, by a freer lending and investment policy on the part of the banks, which would tend to place funds with those ready to spend them. Secondly, it may be brought about through the freer use of existing deposits.

The velocity of turnover of bank deposits has remained subnormal. While the total of all bank deposits has increased by some $7,000,000,000 during the past 18 months, the average velocity of turnover of each dollar of deposits, as measured by debits to individual accounts, has remained around the low level of the depression. However, if the sentiment of purchasing agents is a reliable indication, more active use of these bank deposits will be seen with a little further encouragement from Washington.

Let Public Own Reserve Stock, Urges Big Bank

Change Preferable to Federal Control, Says Guaranty Trust Co.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—Transfer of ownership of Federal Reserve Bank stock from commercial banks to the public, rather than to the Government, was advocated today by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York in its monthly survey.

"If it should be decided that a change in the ownership of the Federal Reserve Bank stock be desirable, it is our belief that the ownership should be transferred from the commercial banks to the public, rather than to the Government," it was stated.

"Our study of this subject has led us to the conclusion that it is entirely practicable to provide for the ownership of the Federal Reserve banks by a large number of individual citizens, with limitations on the amount of stock that might be held by any individual.

"In our opinion, all or a majority of the directors of the Federal Reserve banks should be selected by the stockholders, with necessary provision to insure the representation of the banks' stockholders in all parts of the United States.

Protection from Politics.

"We believe that if a change of ownership is to be made, it is in this direction, not in Government ownership, that the Federal Reserve banking system can best be protected from political domination."

The bank's comment was based on the recent statement of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau advocating an independent Federal Reserve Board somewhat similar to the Supreme Court, appointed by the President but removable only by impeachment.

"This, in our opinion, would be a great improvement over the board as now constituted or as provided for in the (banking) bill," the Guaranty stated.

"The Secretary, however, also advocated Government ownership of the stock of the Federal Reserve banks, which would tend to undermine the independence of the board."

Such ownership by the Government, the Guaranty stated, would encourage and strengthen political pressure designed to affect the policies of the system and "would be entirely inconsistent with our own belief that a borrower should not control the policies or the ownership of the institution from which it borrows."

Wall St. Forms Realty Firms, Predicting Boom

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—Two Wall street syndicates formed to trade in real estate as a fruitful field for capital investment, were moving today on the tide of a new realty buying wave.

One, known as the International Syndicate, which had owned properties in Berlin and in China, purchased a holding in Sixth avenue a few days ago. Another is the New York Realties. A third, now being formed, is reported to have a trading fund of $15,000,000.

Walter McMeekan, who resigned from a large New York bank to direct the New York Realties, expressed the opinion that real estate was in the recovery stage and predicted a noticeable increase in its demand after a general realization of the fact.

Those in the trade point to the public outpouring last week to bid for 62 properties put up at auction for the New York State Insurance Department. There had not been for several years a similar demonstration and bidding so keen, observers said.

Transit Revenues Show Gain.

New York, May 26.—From a decrease of 3.2 per cent in revenue paying passengers in March, 1935, compared with March, 1934, to an increase of 0.9 per cent in April, 1935, as compared with April, 1934, the surface cars, buses, elevated and subway lines of the Nation are showing appreciable gains in the number of passengers carried, the American Transit Association announced today.

Harvard Tests Consumers' Ranking of Advertisements

Results Found in the Main Dependable When Compared With Sales on Which Accurate Figures Were Available.

Cambridge, Mass., May 26.—That a group of consumers can be relied upon to give dependable rankings of advertisements previous to their publication, but that the application of this so-called "consumer jury" method of testing to the advertisements of many products is precluded by the difficulty of finding people really interested in the products to act as jurors, are the main findings of a study released by the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration today. This study, entitled "A Test of the Consumer Jury Method of Ranking Advertisements," was made by Profs. Neil H. Borden and Osgood S. Lovekin, with the assistance of Paul K. Edwards, of Fisk University, and Mrs. Mabel Taylor Gragg.

The method followed in the study was that of comparing the rankings determined by actual inquiries or sales results known to have been achieved by the advertisements.

17 Series Tested.

In the selection of the series to be tested great care was taken to secure advertisements which were demonstrably of varying effectiveness. Seventeen series of such advertisements were submitted to from 60 to 210 individuals to be ranked on the basis of two questions: (1) If you were turning the pages of a magazine, which of these advertisements would be most likely to attract your attention? (2) Which of the advertisements would be most likely to influence you to send in for the article offered?

In only one of the 17 instances did the consumer rankings definitely contradict the known results on both questions. In two cases there was agreement on only one of the questions. For the remaining 15 series the order of rankings by consumers in every instance agreed with the known rankings from inquiry returns; that is, in each instance a majority of the consumers gave judgments which corresponded with the actual returns. In some instances, however, these majorities were not large enough to inspire confidence in their reliability.

A further analysis of the returns showed that for those products for which the consumer jury rankings were not in accord with the business returns or were not ranked decisively in agreement with actual returns, the product offered was one that appealed to a relatively limited number of people.

Difficult to Pick a Jury.

To find people really interested in such products to act as jurors is difficult, if not impossible, in many cases. Accordingly, it was concluded that the consumer jury method was not dependable for products with a limited appeal.

In the selection of advertisements to be tested and in the rating of advertisements by consumer juries, mathematical formulae were applied to make certain that the rankings were fully significant and not merely the result of chance selection. The formulae applied in the selection and ranking of advertisements are reproduced in the report in full, as well as the advertisements which were rated. Although numerous studies upon the consumer jury method of ranking have been made, this is believed to be the first extensive study in which the advertisements tested have been reproduced and all the detailed data relating to the study have been presented.

Hogs, $12.40 Each, Tilt Snouts in Pride

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 26.—Worth more than at any time in the last five years, porkers hogged the market spotlight today as the top price advanced 60 cents this week to a new peak of $10.15, exclusive of the $2.25 processing tax. Several factors motivated the upsurge. Hogs came in at the lowest rate since the turn of the century. Only 53,500 head were received here this week and the seven leading markets had a combined total of only 156,500, scarcely more than a third of the run during the same period in 1934. The drought and the Federal destruction of pigs also resulted in curtailed supplies.

Steel Capacity Recedes 1½% To 44 Per Cent

Sheet and Strip Mill Operations, as Well as Tinplate, Decline.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 26.—Unfavorable influences predominated in the iron and steel markets last week, reducing steelworks operations 1½ points to 44 per cent, states the magazine Steel.

New automotive steel commitments and shipments failed to rally as well as expected following settlement of the industry's strikes, although automobile assemblies snapped back last week to 101,000, from 90,000 in the preceding week.

Sheet and strip mill operations did not regain the ground lost through recent automobile suspensions. Tin plate production fell 10 points to 75 per cent, as can makers' specifications declined, and mill warehouses filled up with record tonnages.

Unless there is a substantial rebound this week, which appears improbable, May—normally associated with rising industrial activity—is likely to show the lightest steel output so far this year.

Consumers generally are absorbing their stocks, buying cautiously, awaiting the outcome of labor legislation at Washington, and clarification of the NRA issue with its price-control features after June 16.

The nominal extension of prices for third quarter—now unchanged for nearly a year—has favored a continuation of short-range buying, and there are few commitments at this time for the full quarter. In the steel industry there is some discussion pertaining to the feasibility of setting up a trade body to enforce fair prices, should the steel code be abandoned.

Operating Cost Lowers Pepco's April Income

Total Was $321,567, or $12,674 Less Than 1934 Month.

Skyrocketing operating costs that have been making steady inroads into the earnings of local business concerns were held responsible yesterday for a substantial decrease in net earnings of the Potomac Electric Power Co. during April, as compared with the same month of a year ago.

The power firm's net during the past month was $321,567, less by $12,674, than the earnings reported during the previous April. At the same time gross operating revenue jumped $106,383, for an intake of $1,091,736.

Revenue deductions called for $689,483, in comparison with $576,564, during April of 1934, an increase of $112,919.

Metal Working Industry Short Of Skilled Men

Present Need Is 19,034, but Normally Lack Would Be 123,357.

New York, May 26.—A shortage of 1,193 skilled craftsmen is reported by 287 metal manufacturing companies employing 115,260 wage earners, according to a study just completed by the National Industrial Conference Board. In the metal working industry as a whole, the shortage of skilled workers is estimated at 19,034. If this industry resumes normal operations, the board points out, the shortage of skilled workers would be increased to 123,357.

Some of the important factors that have brought about this shortage of highly skilled mechanical labor are listed by the Conference Board as follows:

1. Tendency to develop single machine operators for special machines in place of all-around mechanics capable of operating any machine.

2. Abandonment of industrial employment by skilled craftsmen in favor of other occupations.

3. Deterioration in skill and usefulness of more mature workers through prolonged unemployment.

Obsolescence and Mortality.

4. Reduction in the supply of highly skilled labor because of obsolescence and mortality at the estimated rate of 5 per cent per year, resulting in a 25 per cent loss from this cause since the beginning of the depression.

5. Inadequate apprentice training before the depression, the loss from this cause being aggravated by the suspension of many apprenticeship programs during the depression.

6. Reduction in working hours under NRA codes has made the existing supply of highly skilled mechanical labor from 20 per cent to 40 per cent less effective.

7. Code restrictions on the number of learners who can be employed at less than the minimum wage scale restricts the scope of apprentice training.

8. Industry's inability, because of business uncertainty, to assure continued employment, influences mechanics on relief to refuse jobs which may be temporary, because of the difficulty in obtaining reinstatement on relief rolls after leaving them. (VT-5-21-35-CO-p. 1.)

9. Government enterprises, such as navy yards and public works projects, have drawn from industry some of its most highly skilled labor because of industry's inability to compete with Government wage scales and because of the more continuous work on Government projects.

Scrapping NRA Is Suggested.

In its survey the Conference Board asked industrial management to suggest what measures would be most effective in relieving the present situation and preventing the danger of an acute shortage of skilled labor in the event of a genuine business recovery. Among the important suggestions made by employers are the following:

1. Abolition of the NRA and code limitations on working hours.

2. Changes in the method of granting public relief so as to make the receipt of the dole much less attractive than employment in private industry.

3. Discontinuance of unfair competition for skilled labor by Government agencies and reduction of public works wage scales to bring them into line with actual prevailing levels.

4. Allocation of part of the Government expenditures under the work relief bill to finance the training of unemployed labor.

$376,500 Contract Awarded by PWA

The Public Works Administration has awarded to T. L. James & Co., Ruston, La., the $376,500 contract for construction of the Thurman street low-cost housing project in Montgomery, Ala.

STRANGE as it seems, the Mississippi River flows uphill during the entire course. It is four miles higher at the mouth, where it flows into the Gulf of Mexico, than it is at its source.

This is due to the strange conformation of the earth—the earth being not a perfect sphere but a spheroid flattened at the poles and bulging at the Equator. The poles are about 13 miles nearer the center of the earth than the Equator. Because the Mississippi River flows from north to south, the watercourse becomes farther and farther from the center of the earth as it goes along. The United States Geological Survey estimates that the mouth of the Mississippi is four miles farther away from the center of the earth than the source. Of course, if computations are made on the basis of sea level, the Mississippi River, like any other river, flows downhill.

When Henry Christophe, King of Haiti, wished to provide a monetary standard for his country, gold and silver were not available for the royal treasury. This lack he solved by confiscating every green gourd in the country, then reissuing them at so much per gourd as coin of the realm. This supplied Haiti with an adequate internal coinage—although green gourds were not much thought of in international exchange.

Natives use skin excretions of poisonous dendrobates tinctorius frogs to change the color of green Amazon parrots. Feathers are plucked from the birds in patterns, then the bare skin is rubbed with the frog excretion. The new feathers grow out in bright yellow.

Combinations Featuring Blue Outstanding in Style Parades

There is an undeniable exhilaration about clothes, whether they are your own to wear and glow in and be self-assured, and even occasionally a trifle smug, or whether they belong to someone else and lend an air of glamor and enchantment to people you meet for luncheon or tea or dinner. One of the most amazing things about Washington society is the wide range of delightful personalities which compose it, many of them bringing to the scene an air of enchanted distance.

And when all of these visitors in our midst, who frequently settle down to make Washington their permanent home, are combined with members of early Washington families the result is intriguing in the extreme. All the fascinating things about clothes are then intensified when they reflect the personalities of such a great variety of people, all of whom have one thing in common. They are interested and they are interesting.

Mrs. Victor Alfaro, whose picture is shown at the extreme left of the page, with her pedigreed chow, was wearing a two-piece boucle suit when the picture was taken. It is a dark rich green, and blends, not excitingly, but in a vary satisfying way with the cream colored blouse which is worn with it. Her ties are dark brown suede.

One of the first lessons to be planted firmly in the fashion consciousness of the young has to do with the theory that black, or black and white, has only one serious contender for first place in the realms of smart apparel. That place goes to navy blue or navy blue combined judiciously with white. With that theory in mind it is no secret why Mrs. Kurt Hetzel and Mrs. Campbell Prichett were so smartly attired as they walked down one of the avenues last week. Mrs. Hetzel was wearing a street-length coat of midnight blue with a wide cape of silver fox furs. Excepting her gloves, which were snowy white, all the accessories were of navy blue.

The hat, incidentally was of crisp navy taffeta. Mrs. Prichett was wearing an ensemble in which navy blue predominated. Heavy dark blue threads in a scattered pattern on a ground of gray crepe made the frock, which had a collar and a large white flower of very white, very crisp pique. Her hat of rough straw in an off-the-face line, her gloves, her shoes and bag were of navy blue.

Mrs. Charles G. Ainseny, of Florida, and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, who is president of the Woman's National Democratic Club, were photographed in more informal attire as they chatted at the tea given by the club in the gardens of Senator and Mrs. Key Pitman's home. Mrs. Ainseny wore a model of heavy white crepe, depending entirely on the tucking on the pockets and at the neck for smartness. With it she wore a white hat and gloves and shoes. Mrs. Meigs was an interesting contrast in black and white print, with all her accessories of white.

Rosa Schulteis Weds at Mass In Chevy Chase

Frank Reilly, Philadelphia, Is Bridegroom at Private Ceremony.

The marriage of Miss Rosa Schulteis, daughter of Mrs. Schulteis and the late Albert Schulteis, and Frank J. Reilly, of Philadelphia, was solemnized at a nuptial mass at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament in Chevy Chase, Md., on Wednesday. Mr. Reilly is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Reilly, of Philadelphia. The Rev. Thomas G. Smyth performed the ceremony with only members of the immediate families and a few close friends as witnesses.

The bride wore a frock of dark blue with a large blue hat and a corsage of white orchids and liles of the valley. Attending the bride was her sister, Miss Mary Schulteis, who wore powder blue crepe with hat and accessories of dark blue and a corsage of sweetheart roses and liles of the valley. Joseph Reilly, of Philadelphia, was best man for his brother.

Gleanings from Current Verse

Selected by Hope Ridings Miller.

Old Rail Fence.

AS SURELY as a shadow falls behind you,
As surely as a titmouse tries to swing,
As surely as a weasel wind will find you
An old rail fence will follow you in spring.

You need not think that running will evade it;
I've seen it put to shame Pheidippides.
To rest a little while beneath the trees.

But never long for soon the hump and buckle,
"I'm off again," it seems to say, and, true:
Groaning beneath a cloud of honeysuckle,
Over the hill and down and out of view.

I shall return by waters cool and sweet,"
Suddenly, like a ghost, it's swum the river
And circled 'round and cut off all retreat!

The best I know to do is not defiance,
But something like a pact before the gloam,
A sort of Sunset—Old Rail Fence Alliance,
And turning, all together, go back home.

The Heart of Man.

THIS IS THE tree that can not be overthrown,
These are the branches that leafless can still cast shade,
Here is the bud which canker may claim for its own,
Yet can not devour. Oh, this tree was made

For you—for your utmost need, for your black despair;
Though the whirlwind bow and the earthquake heave at its root,
It will rise in beauty and strength through the darkened air,
It will flower, it will bear fruit!

Depth.

BEAT, THRASH the water with blind hands,
Thrust dumbly upward, smothered with a cry,
The packed denial of a breath, the alien sky
Betrays, battens under, fetters with iron bands
For death's consignment—struggle one time more,
Break water, gasp, taste the keen pain,
The thin sharp joy the bursting lungs forbore—
Know life again.
Lie calmly now reft from grief's dark quality;
Face upward to the sun-filled firmament,
Drink deep, drink deep the peace of unity—
This is your element,
Never again shall you be without this wonder—
The rhythm-rocking of a terrible grief
That fought through, struggled under,
Can bear you up as lightly as a leaf.

WITH BROKEN strings a mandolin
Reposes idly in its case;
I turned the key and looked within
As one who views a sacred place.

For I recalled the tunes you played
At dusk, released from day-time care;
I saw you as your fingres strayed
Across the strings with musing air.

To me it is melodious
With chords of old remeberings;
Foolish, and yet I keep it thus—
Your life was like these broken strings.

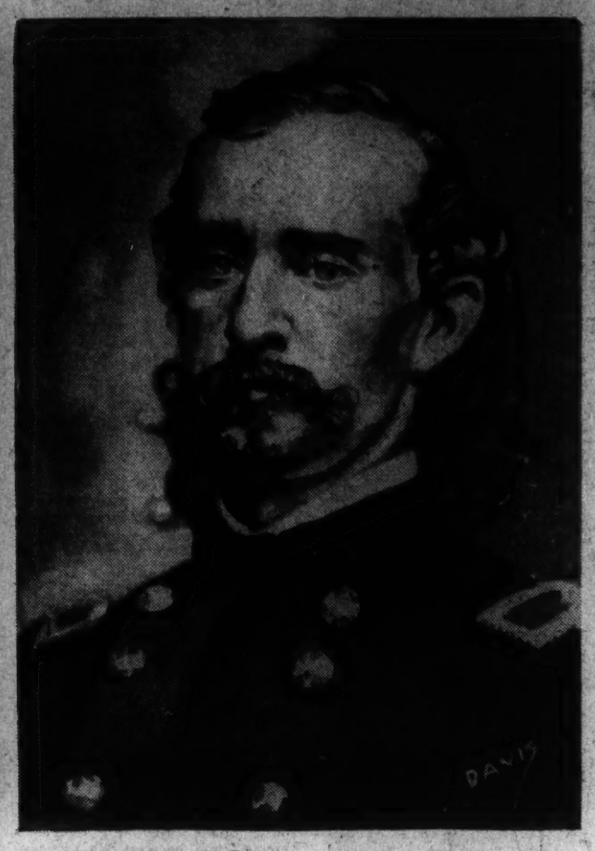
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

George Armstrong Custer—Elizabeth Bacon.



While a schoolboy, George Armstrong Custer met Elizabeth Bacon as she was swinging on a gate. Later while on sick leave as a Civil War hero he met her and the romance was renewed. They were married in 1864 and lived happily together until his heroic death while fighting Indians.

The 'Boy General With the Golden Locks' Won Fair Bride.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

IT WAS CIRCUS time in Washington last week. Under the big top the performers, gathered from all corners of the globe, presented hair raising feats. The glamor and excitement held all in thrall. Then like a flash came a glimpse of part of America's past when the announcer introduced a stalwart Indian resplendent in war paint and ceremonial dress as "John Sitting Bull, jr." This red man as a lad had watched from his father's tepee the battle between Custer and his gallant men and Sitting Bull's force on those never to be forgotten last days in June, 1876, when a new chapter in heroism was written into American military history.

The story of Custer's Last Stand has thrilled thousands of hearts and the dauntless courage of this officer and his men is one of the proud pages of our national annals.

A portion of the story that is not often told is how three women in a little officer's quarters house at Fort Lincoln fell weeping on their knees, on July 6, 1876, 11 days after the battle when the news of Custer's valiant last fight was brought to them. These women were Elizabeth Bacon Custer, the general's widow, his sister, Mrs. Calhoun and his niece, Miss Reed. As Elizabeth Bacon Custer knelt there and prayed for her lost hero, what memories of their lives together must have flashed through her mind!

"The Boy General."

"The Boy General with the Golden Locks" he had been called in the Civil War. Alas, those locks now grayer adorned the belt of a rejoicing Indian warrior, and all that was mortal of George Armstrong Custer had been the prey of the keen knives of Indian women "the clean-up squad" of Indian conflicts.

But let us flash the scene back to a happier day in the life of Custer. It was a gray December day—the fifth—of 1839, and in the home of a blacksmith Emmanual Custer, a Maryland-born pioneer and his second wife, Maria Fitzpatrick, a first child had been born that day. In their wildest dreams they could not have imagined that this tiny son of theirs would some day rise to such heights of military glory and die such a tragic but glorious death.

There were proud strains in little George Armstrong Custer's family lines, for a great-great-grandparent had married Sara Martha Ball, cousin to the mother of George Washington. Perhaps it was the remembrance of that distant event that gave George his name.

The hard toil of a farm with "chores" for all, young and old, was the first discipline George Armstrong Custer knew. School sessions were few and far between and always shared with farm work. Then in 1849 came an event which was to alter the whole course of his life. His half sister Lydia married a David Reed, of Monroe, Mich. She begged that her brother accompany her to the new home. For two years he went to school there, then returned home, later to be sent back to Monroe.

Turned to West Point.

Among the leading citizens of the town was a wealthy Daniel S. Bacon, judge of probate and president of the bank. He had a beautiful home and a lovely daughter, little Elizabeth. One day as George Armstrong Custer passed along he saw her swinging on the garden gate. "Hello, you Custer boy," she greeted him, and then, overcome by shyness, fled into the house. That was the first meeting and the beginning of this military romance.

The eyes of the lad now turned on West Point. Through diligent persistence he obtained an appointment to the academy. This document was signed by the then Secretary of War, Jefferson Davis, and in June, 1857, young Custer arrived at West Point.

A biographer of Custer has described him at this period of his life as "just under six feet in height, broad-shouldered and big-boned. He is said to have been the second strongest man in his class. His eyes were bright blue, his hair golden yellow and his complexion so innocent a pink and white that the cadets, to his horror, nicknamed him 'Fanny.'"

Custer was not a particular good student and he acquired a collection of demerits that almost lost him the chance for a military education. He stood, upon graduation in 1861 at the very bottom of the 34 graduates from the Academy. But he was popular with his fellow cadets and, as events proved, had acquired considerable military knowledge after all.

His knowledge was soon to be tested on the battlefield itself. The bugles sounded "to arms" at West Point, as elsewhere, and on July 19, of the same year, we find him in Washington, gay in a new field uniform reporting for active duty. Gen. Winfield Scott, at his request, assigned him to field duty and his first task was to carry dispatches from the grizzled old Mexican War veteran to Gen. McDowell "somewhere in Virginia."

In October, 1861, Custer was ill and was sent home on sick leave. He went to his sister's home in Monroe, Mich. There the belles of the town grew lyrical with the thought of a real war hero in their midst. He had been at "Bull Run," he had been under fire, he could tell them the latest news from the front.

Among the belles he met was Elizabeth Bacon, now past the gate-swinging age but apparently as shy as ever. Under the impetus of war excitement their romance progessed rapidly. Her father was not so pleased with the swaggering young soldier who lingered on in Monroe until February of 1862, when he returned to field duty. In fact, he forbade Elizabeth to accept his attentions. But love in 1862—as in 1935—laughed at such parental restrictions and it is said that Elizabeth was willing even to elope with her gallant young warrior.

Rose Rapidly in Rank.

Custer rose rapidly in military rank until at 23 he was a general. Naturally this must have impressed Judge Bacon. At any way, the path of true love appears to have been a trifle smoother from that time on. In October, 1863, he went boldly to Judge Bacon and asked for Elizabeth's hand. The judge gave a written answer in which he would not commit himself as to an actual engagement, but permitted a correspondence between the lovers.

That was the beginning of success in this romance. The judge's resistance little by little was worn down. On February 8, 1864, a gay wedding party assembled in the Monroe Presbyterian Church. The bridegroom was in the uniform of a brigadier general, accompanied by his whole staff and the brief honeymoon, 11 days long, was spent partly in Washington and partly in the camp of Custer's Brigade where the little bride was adored by all.

Then came the long wait for Elizabeth at Washington, watching and praying and hoping her hero would return safely to her. He did come home from the wars laden with titles and a soldier's fair fame. The West Point cadet who stood at the foot of the class was now near the top in the real game of warfare.

The Civil War over, Custer found vent for his military experience in frontier service and Indian skirmishes. Elizabeth knew the hardships and perils of a soldier's wife on frontier service. But she did not lament. It was all part of the lot of a general's lady and she bore the hardships with high courage, content if near her hero.

Perhaps when she heard that dire news in July, 1876, which ended forever her hopes of earthly happiness, she may have remembered those immortal words of Col. Lovelace, a favorite poem of Gen. Custer's, by the way:

Tell me not, Sweet, I am unkind
That from the nunnery
Of thy chaste breast and quiet mind,
To war and arms I fly.

True, a new mistress now I chase,
The first foe in the field;
And with a stronger faith embrace
A sword, a horse, a shield.

Yet this inconstancy is such
As thou too shalt adore;
I could not love thee, Dear, so much,
Loved I not Honor more.

A Little Girl Swinging on Front Gate Followed Him to Frontier.

Study of Birds Reveals Males Are Don Juans

United Press Staff Writer.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 26. —Male birds—blue birds at least—are Don Juans of no small accomplishments with the weaker sex.

Mrs. F. C. Laskey, Nashville, whose hobby is banding birds has found that a male bluebird which nests in her five-acre lawn mated and raised families with five different wives during 1931, '32 and '33.

Mocking bird swains also often feel a change of heart, changing mates several times each season.

Mrs. Laskey describes a prancing dance often performed by two mocking birds as a pre-fight maneuver rather than a courting gesture as defined by some ornithologists.

Mocking birds, she says are characteristically belligerent toward any other bird which invades their adopted territory. The dance, accompanied by chirping, is an "off my territory" warning. The Nashville woman bases her theory mainly on the discovery that mocking birds do not indulge in the dance during the mating season.

Since the United States Biological Survey authorized Mrs. Laskey's bird-banding station in 1931, she has placed metal strips on legs of more than 4,700 birds of 74 species. More than 1,300 were field sparrows. She visits her 14 traps twice a day. She uses fruit, dried bread, berries and sunflower seed for bait.

Daily records are kept on the birds banded and banded birds caught. Some days she lists as many as 80. A few of the individual birds are trapped as many as 200 times each.

Children Learn to Like Poetry From May Fetes, Teacher Says

Programs Make Comradeship Between Pupils of All Ages.

WHY ARE May fetes?

Anyone who passes a high school or college campus this month may well ask this question. Tired teachers who drill the students for their Maypole gambols and tired mothers who sew costumes for them may also ask it.

However, a May fete was a deeper educational value than appears on the surface, according to Mrs. Helen Arny Macan, headmistress at St. Agnes' School, Alexandria, Va., where a Shakespearan fete was recently staged.

Not only does it stimulate the inborn love of pageantry, pomp and color in children, she points out, but also develops comradeship between all ages of young people and develops an acquaintance with poetry that could not be obtained through a book.

Lessons in Economy.

"At our fete," Mrs. Macan said, "the high school girls played ringarosy with our kindergarten babies between rehearsals. And boys forgot that they thought it was sissy to do a few dance steps."

Practical economy lessons came from the May fete, for by careful planning the cost of costumes was kept to a minimum. The elves and gnomes, for instance, danced in dyed underwear! No costumes were rented, but were designed and executed by students, faculty and patrons.

"When entertainment is based on good literature and music, there is lasting benefit," Mrs. Macan said. "This year St. Agnes' May fete presented scenes from 'Midsummer Night's Dream' with 'Pyramus and Thisby' in its entirety.

Interest in Plays Inspired.

"We all—even the kindergarten children—had great glee over Nick Bottom and the other funny characters, and even the smallest of the pupils will have a memory of these famous Shakespearean entertainers.

"And up and down the school stairs, between classes, out under the trees at lunch time, on our athletic field and at meal times we teachers heard with delight children quoting snatches of 'Midsummer Night's Dream' from the parts they had been learning for the May fete. . . .

"'What hampen homespuns have we here? . . . You spotted snake with double tongue, . . . or—

'Do it for thy true love; take
Love and an anguish for his sake.'

"Our classrooms couldn't inspire this lively interest in a Shakespearean play. But our May fete could."

Harris & Ewing.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Loneliness Which He Fears May Lead to Morbidity Afflicts 31-Year-Old College Graduate, Who Yearns for Women Friends.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am in a state of extreme financial and emotional depression, due to the fact that I have been unemployed for the last three years and there is absolutely no prospect of employment in the offing. But as I am more or less inured to hardships, I will pass that over.

There is one thing which is troubling me even more—I have no congenial women companions, the lack of whom I feel greatly, for no man ever cared more for the company of refined, artistic and cultured women than I do, and no man has had less opportunity to meet them.

* * * *

Before I go further with my letter I shall give you some idea of my personality and background. I am a young man of 31, a college graduate, and am trying to write for a living. But, so far, all my manuscripts have either gone into the editor's waste-basket or been returned to me.

Being an ardent student of psychology and its implications, I have tried to analyze myself intelligently. I find I am exteremly temperamental. I do not mean that I fly into a rage when crossed, but that I am prone to an overwhelming feeling of loneliness which, unless checked, may in time lead to morbidity.

* * * *

Also, I plead guilty to having a flair for poetry. The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam is my favorite for pure beauty of language and Tennyson's "Lady of Shalott" for romantic charm. For emotional and mental excursions, I look to Poe's "Raven" and "Ulalume." Needless to say, I have a profound love of music, art, all that is beautiful and sacred in human hearts.

* * * *

In music, Lizst's immortal "Libestraum," arranged for organ, and Nevin's "Venetian Love Song" are my favorites. I love aviation, having had 26 hours in the air in my palmier days. I had the pleasure of going on a minor expedition once in my life. Such are the things which appeal to me and in which I find emotional satisfaction.

In order to forestall the great emptiness creeping into my life I am trying to establish new and congenial associations among both men and women, regardless of age, creed or condition of life. I have found much pleasure in association with older folk. I like to hobnob with persons of all races whose language I speak. Now, as to my prejudices: I despise politicians, racketeers, publicity stunters and big league athletics. What do these contribute to the advancement of the welfare of mankind?

* * * *

I may add that I love to collect old books and have actually been successful in finding a rare, unexpurgated edition of "Rabelais" and old copy of "Don Quixote." Also I have a first edition of "Ben Hur."

* * * *

Of course, musing over these things occupies some of my time, but I still have too much leisure and don't know what to do with it. Will you please suggest some program for alleviating my loneliness and utilizing my leisure? I may add that I try to be a liberal thinker. I do not attend church regularly, believing even the so-called heathen may have the qualities which the orthodox call "good."

Sincerely yours, MR. X.

A Modern Narcissus.

DEAR MR X.: Your letter is an unaware insult to your own presumable mental maturity as a 31-year-old college graduate, in its confession of inability to devise a program for constructive use of leisure time; in its fond musing over rather sophomorically limited preferences in music and literature, and in the childish blindness of its statement that while you yearn for the companionship of "refined, artistic and cultured women, no man ever had less opportunity to meet them."

How did you spend your college years, if not in gaining sufficient sociological information to know how to find some tenable groove in life? if not in meeting girls some few of whom must have been potentially women of the highest type?

* * * *

I think your fundamental trouble is, and has been, a tendency toward Narcissism: a contemplation of self so rapt you have not seen, hence have no knowledge or understanding of, the practical world about you. Loneliness is the fruit of egoism, and egoism, according to Webster's dictionary, is "excessive love and thought of self; . . . excessive reference to one's own experience, customs and opinions."

* * * *

As a matter of fact, so excessive has been your preoccupation with self in the foregoing letter that you have entirely overlooked the fact one would need to know something concrete about the practical aspects of your situation before making specific suggestions for improving upon it.

* * * *

You haven't said what you can do or would consider doing as alternatives. You do mention that you "try to write for a living," but so do many who have no qualifications for the task. You haven't said whether you're modestly subsdized or wholly dependent; whether you live with your parents or elsewhere.

* * * *

If you can make a more practical survey of your situation and give me some latitudinal and longitudinal information, I shall be better equipped to help you get your bearings and proceed in the desired direction.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Animals, Fowl Likely Victims Of Tuberculosis

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE human family has no monopoly on tuberculosis. Animals rather generally, as well as fowls, are susceptible. The type that attacks man, though having many characteristics in common with bovine (cattle) and avian (bird) tuberculosis, nevertheless differs in many respects.

More than 60 years ago a French scientist suggested that birds probably had tuberculosis. It was not until the very beginning of this century, however, that any considerable attention was given to the disease that had been recognized in turkeys, pigeons, chickens, ducks, geese, pheasants, English sparrows, etc.

Within the last 20 years fowl tuberculosis has spread with great rapidity in certain parts of the country, and agriculturists have viewed the situation with much concern.

Judged by the nature of its spread there is every reason to believe that bird tuberculosis rarely, if ever, affects man. One observer tested several hundred cases of human tuberculosis without finding a single trace of the avian type, despite the fact that the territory in which these patients lived was heavily infested with fowl tuberculosis. On the other hand, nine of the human cases were found to react to the bovine strain. Between 1905 and 1929 only a few cases of avian tuberculosis in man were reported, and not all of these were definitely proved. While bird tuberculosis has been increasing, we may reassure ourselves that at this time it is not potentially dangerous to the human family.

However, there is little doubt but that bacteria undergo changes in form and virulence. Some that live on a particular kind of food and in a special environment may, when deprived of that food and that environment, change from virulent to innocent organisms, or the reverse. Fowl tuberculosis, therefore, gives us pause lest we ignore something that may in a few decades become infectious to man and thus add another serious burden to our present day problem with a stubborn disease.

Solka Exhibits To Be Brought To Local Store

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE MENTION of gold, silver, and precious stones conjures up thoughts of peril tragedy, and romance. The name Solka means little to the average person. And yet, around Solka there is written one of the most dramatic stories dealing with modern industry.

Solka is highly purified cellulose, or cellular plant tissue. It is the basic ingredient for hundreds of commercial products, an ingredient as thoroughly one of the modern age as streamline locomotives and giant aircrafts.

To industries of today the discovery of Solka was revolutionary. Cellulose, of course, was known. But this cellulose did not exceed 87 per cent purity in commercial production. A group of research engineers working in the laboratories of a large concern was asked if possible to secure cellulose of 90 per cent purity. This seemed virtually impossible. But the small group of men set sternly to work.

Discovery Made.

Finally from the hills of New Hampshire, where they were perfecting and utilizing the fibres from hardy northern trees, came word of the exciting news. Solka had been discovered. Ninety-six per cent pure alpha cellulose had been obtained.

The work of years was rewarded. Thousands of experiments, seemingly hopeless at the time, bore fruit. And while the layman went serenely on with his daily routine, unconscious that a great discovery had been made which would effect almost every product he handled, 32 separate and distinct industries hailed the news enthusiastically.

It is these industries which produce the thousand and one necessities and luxuries which promote the ease of our living. Into these products go Solka to make them more lasting, and more adaptable to our needs.

Used for Many Purposes.

A complete list of the things made from Solka would fill a telephone directory. However, to give you some idea of the important part it plays, here is a brief list of a few department store items in which Solka has the leading role: Shoes, handbags, gloves, hats, belts, luggage, sportswear, fabric, yarns, rugs, draperies, vases, lighting fixtures, children's dishes, pacifiers, sand toys, teething rings, tableware, napkin rings, poker chips, compacts, kitchen utensils, buttons and buckles, dress shields, baby pads, cleansing tissues, towels, stationery, lamp shades and roofing.

Beginning today you may combine your window shopping with a bit of sightseeing if you take advantage of the interesting window displays featured by a downtown store showing Solka in its different styles. Here you may also find an exhibit showing exactly how Solka is made.

Washington is the second city in the United States to be treated to a Solka exhibition (New York being the first), so let's welcome the opportunity to be "in on the know" at this early date.

Mask Cures Blackheads.

Remember the velvet-like mask we mentioned Friday? Here's some more news about it. Not only does it aid sagging muscles and help restore the youthful outline of your face, it does infinitely more! It dissipates blackheads because it dissolves the solidified substance of them.

And it softens and refines the skin texture. Women with coarse complexions should literally rejoice that here is something at last that will bring them the smooth, satiny skin they've so often yearned for. Women with puffiness around the eyes should celebrate, too, for the mask was especially created to banish this far from lovely state.

Those whose skins are marred by small infected areas will find this mask has a healing quality which will actually aid in curing these small blotches.

Incidentally, it is one mask that is not drying to the skin!

You may purchase a jar of it—or have a mask treatment! Call and we'll tell you where!

Paris "Visor" Minded.

Fashion reports say that Paris has become "visor" minded and that there are visors for sports and evening, too. Here in Washington the visor trend may be traced to a local store which features the most adorable sports creation you ever saw.

A four-cornered handkerchief has a visor front. You tie the kerchief around your head, looping it in a low knot in the back. The visor is firmly stationed in front, where it throws a soothing and flattering shade over your eyes.

For tennis, golf, motoring or any outdoor sport, you can not find a more becoming and thoroughly useful headgear. It comes in polka dots of all colors. The price, 50 cents.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

1—Even when not vulnerable it is unwise to make a takeout double with only two honor-tricks.

2—The best way of showing a strong hand with distributed strength.

3—A pass by East would show two honor-tricks or more.

4—Ordinarily, a redouble of this type should be passed.

The Play.

West opened the Queen of spades; South won and looked for means of making his contract. There was, of course, the chance that the spades might be divided 3-3; in this case dummy's Jack of diamonds could be discarded on South's fourth spade. But this seemed a remote hope, because West's takeout double could be counted on to show four spades at least. The only other possibility was a squeeze, and to squeeze for a twelfth trick it is necessary to have eleven taking cards of your own. South went about counting his winners, and found only ten. He counted again and found that if he ruffed three clubs in his hand and drew trumps with dummy's four-card heart length, he would win eleven tricks—the club Ace and three ruffs; four hearts in dummy; two spades, and one diamond. He then proceeded to run his tricks.

Having ruffed out the clubs, South led his heart to dummy and then from dummy led the last trump. South had one diamond and the King-nine-three in spades. West was reduced to four cards. He could not throw a diamond without setting up dummy's Jack; so he let go a spade. This allowed South to lead a spade from dummy and play the nine from his own hand. West won; and he could choose between returning a diamond and a spade. In either case, South would win the diamond Ace and his two remaining spades. The additional spade trick thus established was the twelfth and decisive trick for South.

Visiting Relatives Best Entertained With Round of Favorite D. C. Dishes

Capital Rates With Best of Culinary Centers, Say Authorities.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NOW HERE IS the right way to impress your husband's middle-Western relatives when they come in quest of that long-exploited theory of Washington hospitality. Give them a dinner of favorite round-about-Washington dishes that they will never forget.

Start off with Mrs. George Washington's crab soup. Be sure to prepare it this way:

Mrs. George Washington's Crab Soup.

2 hard-cooked eggs
Grated peel of 1 lemon
1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup sherry
½ cup cream
Salt and pepper

Pick out the meat of the crabs, which have been boiled half an hour, and set aside until needed. Mash the hard-cooked eggs to a paste with a fork and add to them the butter, flour, grated lemon peel and a little pepper. Bring the milk to a boil and pour it gradually onto the well-mixed paste of eggs, etc. Put over a low fire, add the crab meat, and allow to simmer for 3 minutes. Add the cream and bring to the boiling point again, then add sherry, salt, and Worcestershire. Heat sufficiently to serve, but do not boil after the sherry has been added. If picking the meat out of the crabs is too much of an undertaking, the meat sold in tins may be used; half a pound of this will be enough.

Next comes a real boiled Virginia ham, spoon bread and string beans with mustard dressing.

Boiled Virginia Ham.

Put the ham to soak for 24 hours in enough cold water to cover it. Take it out and scrub well with a brush; place in a ham boiler, skin side down, with fresh cold water to more than cover. Add one pint vinegar, two onions, one clove garlic, eight whole cloves, three bay leaves, two tablespoons molasses, celery tops and one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Cover the boiler and cook until done, allowing 20 minutes to each pound of ham, counting from the time the water begins to boil. Take off the stove, but leave in the same water overnight or until perfectly cold. Take out of the water, skin with the aid of a small, sharp knife, put in a baking pan and spread the following mixture evenly over the top.

Mix 1 egg yolk with ½ cup cracker crumbs, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon dry mustard and 1 heaping tablespoon brown sugar. When the fat of the ham is thus covered, put in a hot oven and let brown quickly until a golden brown crust is formed.

Spoon Bread.

Moisten 1 cup corn meal with 1 cup of boiling milk; add 1 tablespoon butter and 1 teaspoon salt and mix well. Add 2 well beaten eggs, and stir in 1 cup cold milk slowly. Sift in 2 level teaspoons baking powder, and pour in hot, well-greased pan. Bake in a moderately hot oven for 50 minutes, and serve as soon as done.

String Beans With Mustard Dressing.

String one pound beans carefully, wash in cold water, and cook in boiling salted water one hour or until tender. In another saucepan bring two cup milk to a boil; pour it on the beaten yolk of one egg which has been beaten up with 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard, and two teaspoons butter and let thicken on the stove for a moment, stirring all the time. Drain the beans; pour over them the milk sauce; add 1 1-2 tablespoons vinegar and salt to taste, and let them boil up once or twice. The sauce will be slightly curdled, which is as it should be.

Queen of Trifles.

Crumble coarsely 1-2 pound lady fingers and eight macaroons, and drench with 1-2 cup sherry. Add 1-2 pound blanched, chopped almonds and 1-4 pound cut up crystallized cherries, and when mixed together put in glass bowl. Pour over these ingredients a thin cooked custard flavored with rose water instead of vanilla. Put spoonfuls of slightly sweetened whipped cream on top of the custard and serve very cold. Use one teaspoon rosewater for three cups of cooked custard and one cup of whipped cream for garnish.

What Today Means

Gemini.

IF MAY 27 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., from 1 to 3 p. m. and from 6 to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 3 to 5 p. m. and from 8 to 10 p. m.

Be careful not to let anyone persuade you to do something which is contrary to your good judgment. It might be best to be outspoken, regarding matters pertaining to money, as beating around the bush is likely to complicate matters. Any form of entertaining requires proper planning, for if details are left to the last minute to be attended to, there is a chance things will go wrong. Married and engaged couples, as well as those hopeful of forming a matrimonial alliance, should avoid using any form of evasion today, as it is liable to be detected.

If a woman and May 27 is your birthday, you have the qualifications required for a woman to achieve success in the business world. There is a possibility of your combining your commercial ability with an artistic or literary career. You have a sentimental nature, so should find married life delightful. Be careful your love for excitement does not lead you to take reckless chances. You may find it poor judgment to try to make money through speculative chances. Music, painting, writing, commercial school work, as well as some forms of brokerage, are lines of activity through which you may make considerable money.

The child born on May 27, when it reaches its teens, may be much easier to control through reasoning and persuasive methods, than by severe discipline.

If a man and May 27 is your natal day, do not permit yourself to become satisfied with earning a mere living. Strive to better yourself, without let up, and you should prosper.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

A QUEER telegram came from Mama about 3 o'clock in the morning. They telephoned it from the telegraph office and Aunt Ellen made Ellen, who had taken it over the telephone, repeat the message several times.

It said, "Well and happy. Please do not worry. Letter of explanation in morning."

Just that. "Not worry!" Aunt Ellen stormed, walking up and down and making a ludicrous picture in her muslin nightgown and her thick blanket robe with a pair of huge, flapping carpet slippers. "Not worry!" Why, how do we know that the telegram wasn't sent by her abductors or her murderers or something?"

Ellen pretended to laugh. Just the same, she felt more than a touch worried herself. "You'd think, Aunt Ellen, that Mama was honestly your soul's affinity, to hear you talk and worry. Why, as long as she's gone you won't need to have your morning, noon and night spat."

A New Partner.

Aunt Ellen sat down suddenly. "We're used to each other," she said. "We've lived together so long that we've grown fond of each other even if we do disagree. That's the way with people who live together for so long."

Ellen pondered that statement. "Well, Aunt Ellen, prepare for the worst. Something tells me that Mama's got a new partner—"

"You mean—you mean Mr. Hardesty?"

"Yes."

And then Ellen got the surprise of her life for her aunt sighed with genuine relief. "Well, if they're legally married, then it's a load off my mind. But no one can understand, not even you, Ellen, how I've suffered with your mother running out nights just like a girl."

Sitting by wee Michael's crib in her own room just a little later, Ellen pondered that statement of her aunt's.

The Letter Came.

So people never got so old that the older generation ceased worrying about their moral conduct? And sometimes people who disliked each other, whose tastes and whose inclinations were all opposite grew actually fond of each other because they had lived together for so long.

None of the next day brought the promised letter from Mama. By special delivery. Delight was written in every line of it. "We followed your example. We were married here in Bethany just a few minutes ago. We're going for a trip—maybe we'll be gone a week or 10 days. Then home. Ted is so wonderful. It solves all our problems. He has told me that I have nothing to worry about now."

There was a great deal more. All in the same mood.

But the one phrase lingered in Ellen's mind all the day. "It solves all our problems."

That was Mama's way of telling Ellen that now she was freed of the burden of debt she had carried so long for Mama. It meant that Mr. Hardesty had agreed to take care of Mama and her obligations. It meant that Ellen would no longer need to work—that she could stay at home.

And right there in Ellen's thoughts dismal realization always came. She hadn't a home to stay in any longer. She had left the home of her husband. And now not even Mama's home would be open to her—for Mama's home would be with Mr. Hardesty. Staying on with Aunt Ellen now was the only home that opened to Ellen.

The last day before she left for the tennis tournament was a frenzy of being busy. Packing to do. A couple of hours' practice—that was a necessity. Getting young Michael ready to stay at home.

Farewell Was Hard.

She had talked that over with Dr. John. "I'll have a responsibile nurse come over from the hospital," he told her. "I'll have her move over tonight to stay until you get back and to look after the little tike. That way it will be better."

Jane Compton came. She was a splendid, dependable person and as Dr. John had said Ellen knew that her mind would be easy about baby Michael.

But saying goodby to the baby was a harder task than Ellen had fancied. He reached out his little arms and hugged her tightly around the neck and he practiced her name. "Ma-ma." Then, prompted by Ellen, "Moth-ah." The cute quaintness of it made them all laugh.

Ellen held her baby very close. "Be good to little Mikie," she whispered, tears flooding her dark eyes. "Be good, Mother's little darling." She gave him into the waiting arms of Jane Compton. "Say bye-bye to Mother."

And, waving his pudgy hands, Michael Junior uttered his very first sentence, "Bye-bye, Ma—ma."

Ben Milford waited outside in his car. He got out hastily when he saw Ellen coming, tucked her bags carefully in the back of the car and Ellen herself in the seat at his side. "We haven't any more than time to make it," he told Ellen. "Got your tickets?"

"Got my ticket, reservation and everything," Ellen laughed, feeling the excitement of the trip rise high within her. "Mr. and Mrs. Benson, I work for them you know, decided that I should go in great style. So I'm not to have a regular berth. I'm to have a stateroom, if you please, and all the trimmings. Mrs. Benson said they'd fire me if I didn't bring home the trophy and she wanted me to get a good rest on the way."

Michael Watched.

How could Ellen know that from the shadows at the depot Michael had watched her gay arrival with Ben Milford? Michael had meant to come and wish her godspeed—he hadn't had the nerve to do it when he saw her so well attended.

There were several packages waiting her in the stateroom. A lovely, imported scarf from Kathleen Works and some of the other girls. New magazines and books to read on the way with a cheery letter from Dr. John and Michael's mother.

But no message from Michael—

The train was well on its way out of the village when the porter knocked at the door. "A letter for you, miss"—and there was a big, formal looking letter addressed to Mrs. Michael Dale, Stateroom 1. The handwriting was the bold, freehand sort that could belong to no other person than Michael Dale himself.

Puts Money Away.

Alone again Ellen opened the envelope with trembling hands. There was a brief note—wishing her the best of luck, just as the letter of a casual acquaintance might, and an enclosure of five crisp twenty dollar bills with the suggestion in the letter that she spend the money for something she wanted.

Ellen put the money and the letter away sadly—if there had been one word of love, one intimate little gleam in the letter. But none—only the casual felicitations of a stranger. The tiniest, most humble gift would have been tearfully accepted—but Michael's money. No, Ellen didn't want Michael's money. She wanted his love—not his money.

Maybe, if she hadn't felt so sorry for herself, just as every human does now and then, Ellen might have caught the rather pathetic picture of Michael trying to write that note, tearing up one note after the other—wondering what he could say when he longed so much to say the right thing and he said, instead, exactly the wrong thing.

And the coming champion cried herself to sleep that night.

Market Plan Asks a Fund Of $5,000,000

U. S. Loan Would Pay for Buildings in 27 Virginia Towns.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 26.—A $5,000,000 expenditure principally of Federal relief funds, for construction in 27 Virginia cities and towns of food distribution centers, will be suggested to John Galleher, National Emergency Council director for Virginia, tomorrow by J. H. Meek, director of markets, State department of agriculture.

Pointing out that marketing facilities of cities have not kept pace with the growth in population and area during the last 50 years, and especially the last 25, Mr. Meek emphasizes the need of modern, adequate quarters for the use of farmers, wholesalers and consumers of agricultural products, advantageously located and well supervised.

Such market centers, which in the largest cities might fill five city blocks, "would benefit perhaps half the population of the State," Mr. Meek estimates.

The terminals would be built close to highways and railroad lines, and would provide ample parking space for farmers and consumers, under the plan suggested by the market director.

Finances would be provided by Federal relief officials for wages, some materials and other costs eligible under the usual terms, and money for real estate and other necessary costs would be provided by the cities, to be retired through income from the rental of booths and other concessions in the terminals, Mr. Meek suggests. Expenditure of Federal money for the purpose would be justified by the employment the projects would create, he declares.

Such facilities would replace open air markets that now litter the streets where they are held, the director points out, and would save farmers the inconvenience and loss occasioned by having to sell their produce in bad weather.

Mr. Meek asks that Mr. Galleher consider the plan, and pledges his division's cooperation in working out further details.

Roads Inquiry At Wytheville Closing Today

Citizens of Southwest to Tell Legislators How Policies Suit Them.

By the Associated Press.

Wytheville, Va., May 26.—Citizens of southwest Virginia were ready today to present their views on highway policies, particularly as they affect the Bristol and Salem construction districts, to the legislative commission holding its final hearing here tomorrow on road matters.

The commission, headed by former State Senator W. O. Rogers, has previously held open meetings at Newport News, Culpeper and Lynchburg.

It was presumed that the group would make an inspection tour of highways in the two districts tomorrow, as they devoted the day following a hearing at the three other centers to such a trip.

Leaders in a preliminary conference held by 300 citizens here last Monday expected to present resolutions adopted at that conference to the commission, which was named by the 1934 General Assembly to investigate present policies and suggest changes it might think advisable in the light of information obtained at the hearings.

Among the resolutions passed by the Assembly last Monday was one advocating concentration of primary highway work on a designated system of approximately 9,000 miles; another, recommending retention by the highway department of all gas and motor vehicle taxes; a third, granting to the highway board permission to work State convicts without restrictions as to the number used on primary or secondary roads; and another urging an appropriation from the general fund to equalize the cost of construction by convicts with that done by contract and free labor.

W. M. Neff, delegate from Washington County, is chairman of a committee named to present the resolutions to the commission.

Woman Bids Mate Farewell, Starts Solitary Life as Nun

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 26.—A curtain dropped at the Carmelite convent just before the hour of prayer today, and for Sister Beatrice of Jesus, who stood behind it, the curtain closed out forever the world she once had known.

It hid the faces of her friends, and of the husband to whom she was married for 18 years—and who is now Brother Oswald, a member of the Society of Jesus. She will never see him again, although at times, with special permission, she may converse with him and with close relatives through a thin partition.

Five years ago Alfredo Oswald and his wife, Beatrice, determined to devote their lives to their religion. As Brother Oswald, he entered the Society of Jesus. She went into the convent and shortly thereafter received the brown habit and white veil of the Carmelite order. Today's meeting was their fifth since 1930—and their last.

The dropping of the curtain closed out the Italy where Sister Beatrice was born; it closed out the Brazil where she and her husband spent much time in travel; it closed out the Peabody Conservatory of Music where she and her husband taught for many years.

Sister Beatrice, the first married woman to be received into the Baltimore convent of the Carmelite order, will devote her time to meditation and prayer and the daily housework duties of the convent.

Her chief occupation will be prayer for those who come to the door, pull the bell rope in the vestibule and ask the nuns to pray for them.

Sharpsburg Won't Get New School This Year

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—Because of failure of a bill providing for a bond issue for schools at the recent legislature, it is unlikely that a new schoolhouse will be erected this year at Sharpsburg, the board of county commissioners announced following an inspection of the school there.

Because it will be necessary to increase the levy for schools to provide for 50 per cent restoration of school teachers' salaries, the board has indicated that it will be impossible to levy money for the new school without a sizeable increase in the tax rate. Bonds were issued several years ago for the erection of the Sharpsburg school, but this money is impounded in a bank that closed.

Virginia Fishermen Accused Of Invading Maryland Waters

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., May 26.—Charging Virginia fishermen are obtaining licenses to fish in Maryland, under names of Maryland residents, and are using 1,000-yard motor-hauled nets which sweep to the bottom of Chesapeake Bay, lower Eastern Shore fishermen today were awaiting results of a protest forwarded to the State Conservation Commissioner.

Local fishermen, who assert their livelihood is threatened, told Commissioner Swepson Earle the Virginians drop their huge nets over a wide area. When the fish are driven out, or are cleared from Virginia waters, they say, Old Dominion haul-seiners follow them into Maryland territory.

They do so, spokesmen here said, by obtaining licenses through Maryland residents. Nets which are licensed at $31 in Virginia may be operated off Somerset County for a $3.25 fee, it was said.

In a letter to Earle last week, three Maryland fishermen—Raymond Ward and Morris and Lloyd Sterling—asked if the conservation department could take action in the matter. Sterling asserted he observed a Virginia haul-seiner in Pocomoke Sound, well over the Maryland line and operating about 200 yards from Sterling's fish traps.

The principal query voiced by lower shore fishermen is whether Virginians, who have licensed a net in their home State, may operate the same net in Maryland waters.

They point out that, especially in the Somerset County area, Maryland fishermen are confined largely to the county waters for the catch on which depends much of their livelihood. Virginia fishermen, on the other hand, may operate throughout Virginia waters, they claim.

Mrs. Godar Faces Trial For Murder

Said to Have Confessed Killing Husband to Save Own Life.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 26.—Mrs. Annabelle Godar, 38-year-old church worker and secretary of the St. James School, today was formally charged with the murder of her husband, Austin Godar, 36, manager of a Hagerstown Laundry. A warrant issued by Justice John Dunn and served on her at police headquarters where she has been held since the shooting last night in the Godars' suburban home.

Justice Dunn, acting coroner, had not decided tonight whether he would hold an inquest, but attorneys meanwhile went ahead with plans to secure the church worker's release on bail.

Clarence Baker, county investigator who questioned Mrs. Godar, said she signed a statement admitting she shot her husband after he had threatened her life. Baker asserted Mrs. Godar told him that her husband returned home intoxicated last night, threw dishes and damaged furniture.

She went into her bedroom, according to the alleged confession, and was lying on the bed when her husband entered.

"I am going to break every bone in your body," was the statement she attributed to Godar. She then took a pistol from beneath her pillow and fired one shot, Baker said. Godar died at Washington County Hospital without a statement.

Mrs. Godar said she had kept the pistol in a bureau drawer, but placed it under her pillow after Godar threatened her on earlier occasions. After the shooting, the alleged confession states, she called police headquarters and asked that a doctor and officers be sent to the house immediately. She submitted to arrest calmly.

Godar was from Canton, Ohio, and moved here about 15 years ago to engage in the laundry business. Mrs. Godar is from Roanoke.

Hadley Holds Rivals Well In Hand

By Shirley L. Povich.

WALTER STEWART, who used to pitch winning baseball for the Nats, was no drawback to the Washington club yesterday as a member of the Cleveland Indians. In fact, he was a great help. During the three innings he was present, Stewart pitched the Indians into a five-run deficit, and it was by that margin that the Nats won the ball game.

Ultimately, the score was 9 to 4, but the Nats had all of their runs before the Indians busied themselves with Irving Hadley. They were at their Sunday best before a gathering of 11,000, who saw 'em shell Stewart and his successor, Thornton Lee, for 15 hits that ran the gamut of singles, doubles, triples and homer uns.

Hadley, the first Washington pitcher to go the nine-inning route in two consecutive starts and win both games, breezed through the first six innings in the comfort of a 9-0 lead and had a four-hit game in his possession going into the seventh. When he wavered at that point, to the exent of permitting three runs, Buck Newsom was rushed to the bull pen for possible relief duty, whereupon Hadley tightened. He pitched an eight-hit game.

Berger Eclipsed.

The highly-advertised Bozie Berger, the local boy who has made good with the Indians, was eclipsed yesterday by Jake Powell, the local boy who has made good with the Nats. Each of 'em gathered a pair of hits and both played a sparkling game in the field, but included among Powell's efforts was a tremendous home run into the left-field bleachers with a man on base in the fifth inning.

The Nats instituted proceedings against Stewart right off the bat. With one out in the first inning, they began to solve the slender left-hander. Ossie Bluege drilled a single into center field and Manush rapped a single into right. Bluege scored from third as Buddy Myer hit into a forced play, and Myer eventually scored on Travis' single to center to put the Nats in front, 2-0.

Stewart, who had pitched a brilliant 1-0, 11-inning shutout against the Yankees in his Cleveland debut a week ago, was jarred out of three more runs in the third. Heinie Manush started it ill with a double into center and Buddy Myer got a lucky single on a looper into short right field when Campbell waved Berger out of the play and then permitted the ball to drop safely. They both scored when Johnny Stone lashed a long triple to left center and Powell's fly scored Stone.

The Nats boosted their margin to 7-0 in the sixth after being the recipients of a lucky break. With two out, Cecil Travis got a lucky single off Thornton Lee with a high bounce in front of the box, but their was nothing lucky about their next hit. It was Powell's terrific sock into the bleachers, the first knocked to that sector by any Nat this season.

Two-Run Flourish.

There were two out in the sixth when the Nats ended their scoring with a two-run flourish. Sammy Hale muffed Ossie Bluege's hard smash to third base and Bluege took an extra base on the blow when Hale threw the ball over Trosky's

Ruth Honored, Fans 3 Times; Reds Win

Braves Are Defeated, 6-3, Before 24,361 Fans in Series Opener.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, May 26.—While the echoes of his three home runs in Pittsburgh yesterday were still reverberating, Babe Ruth came to town today with the Boston Nationals, but Si Johnson struck him out three times—twice swinging—as the Reds took the first game of the series, 6 to 3.

It was "Babe Ruth day," but the big Babe came up four times without making a hit. He fouled out once. Meanwhile, the Reds rocketed two and three base hits off the slants of Frankhouse and the veteran Flint Rhem and took the game handily before a paid attendance of 24,361, the third largest crowd of the season.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 26.—In a wild scoring game in which 30 players were used and 27 hits were made off nine pitchers, the Red Sox repelled the St. Louis Browns, 8 to 7, today, and returned to the first division. A Sunday crowd of 16,000 saw Cronin's team spot the St. Louisians six runs in the first two innings, and then crash through to victory in later innings. Boston used 16 men and made 16 hits.

Bill Werber, Red Sox third baseman, enjoyed a perfect day at the plate, walking once and getting a double and three singles in four other times up. Reynolds made three singles.

Everett, Brown Aiming For K. O. Here Tonight

By Bill McCormick.

THE possibility of a knockout in the Buck Everett-Natie Brown return match at Griffith Stadium tonight was apparent as a special set of gloves was prepared for the heavyweight encounter which not only will open Washington's outdoor season but will launch the season of outdoor punching in the East as well.

The gloves were demanded by Everett to prevent a repetition of his last bout with Brown at the Auditorium when the figters, through an oversight, were armed with mittens even heavier than the eight-ounce minimum set down by the District boxing code.

"Turner and Ahearn bought a pair of pillows from some sporting goods store that was selling out, for the last bout," Jimmy Erwin, manager of Everett, said yesterday. "The gloves not only were several ounces over the eight-ounce weight demanded in the District, but practically all the padding was over the knuckles. In short, Everett and Brown fought the last time with training gloves instead of fighting mittens."

"We found out what we had been given to fight with only after the gloves were handed to us in the ring," Edwin insists. "Of course, then we could do nothing but fight with them as there were no others in the house. I think the heavy gloves deprived Buck of a knockout in the seventh round. You recall that that's the round when he had Brown so befuddled he turned and started toward the wrong corner at the bell."

The special gloves which will be used tonight comply fully with the the District boxing laws, but most of their 8 ounces of weight is well up on the wrist and not over the hitting portion of the hand. They will be examined by Manager Erwin and posibly by Brown's manager, Billy McCarney, this afternoon.

"Buck missed his knockout opportunity the last time because of the overweight affairs on his hands," Erwin maintained yesterday. "Tonight he'll be properly equipped and in even better condition than the last time and I look for him to stop Brown within seven rounds."

Helen Jacobs Easy Victor In Paris

Wilmer Hines Also Scores; Crawford and Quist Take Crown.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 25.—Australia and England split a pair of titles in the French hard court tennis championships today as America's singles aspirants, Helen Jacobs and Wilmer Hines, reached the third round.

Miss Jacobs, the American champion and finalist here a year ago, gave short shrift to Simone Barbier, tenth ranking French player, in her opening singles test. Meeting in the second round as a result of a first-round bye, the American champion dropped only four games as she waded through her French rival, 6—2, 6—2.

Hines, former captain of the University of North Carolina's tennis team, had to travel four sets before he could dispose of Pierre Perizza, of France, 6—3, 6—4, 4—6, 6—4, in a second round match in the men's division.

Interesting as these matches were from an American viewpoint, they were completely overshadowed by the finals in men's and women's doubles.

The all-Australian battle for the men's doubles title saw Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist deal a heavy blow at Australia's tentative Davis Cup arrangements by trouncing Don Turnbull and Vivian McGrath, 6—1, 6—4, 6—2.

Error Aids in Pirates' Victory Over Phillies

Pittsburgh, May 25 (AP).—Fanning nine and allowing only seven hits, Darrell (Cy) Blanton, the sensational rookie, led his Pittsburgh Pirates to their fourth straight victory today by defeating the Phillies, 3 to 1.

Prim and Davis gave the Buccos only six hits, but an error by Haslin in the third allowed the home team to score two runs. It was Blanton's seventh win against two losses and his second victory over the Philadelphia team. Cy Walked three batters.

About 10,000 saw the contest.

Local Net Stars Bow to China Cup Team

Mitchell, Welsh Fight Hard Before Losing Matches.

By George Considine.

SOCIAL Note. Washington's Four Hundred turned out in a body yesterday at Columbia Country Club to enjoy a tennis exhibition between the China's Four Hundred Millian and the Capital's Four Hundred Thousand.

Heading the notable in attendance were the distinguished Chinese Minister, Dr. Sae-Ke Alfred Sze, his daughter, Julie, and the Charge d'Affaires, Dr. Yueng Kue.

Lest we forget, there were some tennis matches also. The local forces represented by Barney Welsh, District champion, and Dooley Mitchell, former title-holder, in the singles and Ralph McElvenny and Bud Markey in doubles proved beyond a doubt that the caliber of tennis played here is unusually high by offering the Davis Cuppers serious opposition.

In the first singles match, Kho Sin Kie, 21-year-old national champion of China, was pressed to the limit by Barney Welsh before the latter went down in three stirring sets, 3—6, 6—4, 6—2. Wearing a white cap and stroking with smooth, stoical versatility, Kho bore a striking resemblance to Norman Brookes, the old Australian master.

Yanks Blank Tigers As Tamulis Pitches

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—Vito Tamulis, the Yankees' rookie southpaw, staged a brilliant comeback today to shut out the Detroit Tigers, 2 to 0, before a crowd of 29,392 paying fans.

Tamulis, hammered by the Browns in a brief appearance as relief hurler yesterday, allowed the Tigers only six hits in a mound duel with another rookie, Joe Sullivan, and didn't let a runner reach third base.

Bill Dickey's fifth home run of the season accounted for the first run off Sullivan in the second inning while Tamulis scored the other on a wild pitch in the third after he had doubled and taken third on Red Rolfe's infield out.

Coach Denies G. W. Stole Talent

Pixlee Refutes Missouri Charge That School Lured Athletes.

Demands That Faurot Proves Charges or Apologize.

JIM PIXLEE, director of athletics at George Washington University, yesterday formally hurled the lie and Don Faurot, football coach at the University of Missouri, who last week named George Wasington as one of four colleges which had been proselyting Missouri's best gridiron talent. Pixlee's denial of the charges were embodied in a written statement to the press, which also disclosed that Dr. Walter Williams of Missouri, had been asked to demand that Faurot either prove his charges or withdraw them.

Pixlee's statement pointed out that although there are eight Missouri boys active in athletics at George Washington, their presence could be ascribed to the fact that Coaches Farrington, Sexton and Myers, all members of his staff, are from Missouri. Pixlee also stated that George Washington had more than 3,000 students from outside the District of Columbia and 14 different States were represented on the Colonials' football squad last year.

Texas, Northeastern and Centenary were the other colleges accused by Faurot of robbing Missouri of athletic talent. Pixlee was absent from Washington when Faurot's allegations came to light. He returned to the District yesterday and filed the formal answer the same day.

Pixlee's statement to the press:

"There is no ground for the statement of Don Faurot charging us with stripping Missouri of athletic material. We have demanded of Mr. Faurot through his president, Dr. Walter Williams, that he prove his charges or withdraw them.

"There is nothing strange in the fact that we have eight Missouri boys active in athletics here. Coaches Farrington, Sexton and Myers are all members of my staff and are all from Missouri. The four of us have hundreds of intimate friends scattered over the State. I have coached 11 years in the colleges of Missouri. With all these contacts it would indeed be strange if no Missouri athletes should find their way into George Washington University.

"Aside from the fact that the athletic staff at George Washington University has strong and varied contacts throughout the State of Missouri there are approximately 100 men and women from Missouri registered in the present student body. More than 100 former students and alumni of George Washington University now live in Missouri. If the athletic department of George Washington University gave encouragement to all the Missouri embryo athletes recommended by our friends, students, former students and alumni we would have from 30 to 50 each year from that State alone.

"George Washington University draws its students from every State in the Union. More than 3,000 come from outside the District of Columbia. They BASEBALL TODAY 3:15 P. M.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

THE man whom a Nation's fandom idolized for 20 years, who threw a baseball harder and faster than any other mortal was able to throw it, and whose modest acceptance of his overwhelming honors caused him not only to be admired but beloved, is on the spot. Of course, I speak of Walter Johnson.

POVICH.

Here in Washington with his Cleveland Indians, Walter Johnson is attempting to ride out the storm which threatens his managerial berth with the Indians. Boss of a club torn by internal strife and dissension, the Big Train is wondering, I think, where it all will end. But he has taken the bit in his teeth and the whip in his hand and if he is to make his exit as manager of the Indians, it will be no passive one.

Last week in Boston, Johnson fired his veteran catcher, Glenn Myatt, off the club with an outright release. His veteran third baseman, Willie Kamm, he sent home "for the good of the ball club." When those words are placed in quotes they are pregnant with fire and temper and in this case there is no exception. According to Johnson, it was no less than mutiny.

But, as usual, there are two sides to the story—Johnson's and Kamm's. One must take his choice. Congratulatory messages received by Johnson since his disciplinary action advised him he should have taken the same step months ago. And out in Cleveland the fans are presently engaged in circulating a petition demanding that Owner Alva Bradley remove the former pitching idol as manager. Opinion is widely divergent.

TO hear Kamm tell it, Johnson was a jealous sort, envious of Kamm's standing and respect among the players on the team. He resented Kamm's advice to the young players, according to Kamm, and thus Johnson sought opportunity to engineer his discharge.

Kamm's friends cite what they say is a concrete example. A young infielder who had made an error returned to the bench where Kamm and Johnson sat side by side, walked past Johnson and inquired of Kamm exactly what the veteran discerned was wrong with the play as executed by the rookie. They say that Johnson resented the fact that the advice of Kamm, not himself, was asked.

Young players were in the habit of coming to him for advice, according to Kamm, and inasmuch as it was from him that they sought it, he always obliged. He wasn't a bad infielder himself, Kamm reminded one. If he could be helpful to the team, he wasn't going to restrain himself.

That is Kamm's story. It was well received both by Cleveland newspaper men and Cleveland fans. The old third baseman is a prime favorite in Cleveland, the known possessor of baseball brains and long regarded as managerial timber. It probably made a hit with other factions on the team known to be not kindly disposed toward Johnson. But Johnson's story differs.

THE veteran Kamm is and was a notorious second-guesser, according to Johnson, and a consummate trouble-maker on the ball club. Cleveland players approached him, Johnson said, with the information that Kamm was cramping their style of play with his advice, that they were not the same type ball players that Kamm was, and could not follow his style.

"I won't have any second-guessers on my club," said Johnson. "Not as long as I am manager. When I said that I sent Kamm home for the good of the ball club, I tried to let him down easy. I didn't want to make any statements that would be uncomfortable for him, but he has forced me to by his own statements which have not been true.

"Any baseball man knows how some old ball players often act. I'm an old-timer myself and I know how an old-timer is apt to feel when he's through. Some of 'em don't know how to be discreet. Kamm is one of 'em. That's all there is to that story. Myatt has his release coming to him. He was making cracks about the management of the club while sitting on the bench. I couldn't tolerate that."

Alva Bradley, owner of the club, who said he was in Washington yesterday on business with the Government, declined further comment on the situation on his ball club except to say that he "would support Johnson as long as Johnson was manager." There was a dubious ring in that "as long as Johnson was manager." On the coaching lines stands Steve O'Neil, the well-liked heir-apparent to Johnson's job.

Maryland Students to Honor Berger, Indian Star, Today

MARYLAND UNIVERSITY'S most illustrious gift to the big leagues, Louis (Bozie) Berger, will be honored today, which has been designated as "Berger Day" at Griffith Stadium.

Omicron Delta Kappa, the national honorary fraternity of which Berger is a member, will collaborate with the University of Maryland Athletic Board and the student body in paying tribute to Berger at the ceremonies at home plate preceding the game between the Nats and the Indians.

The local lad, who starred at Tech High before blazing a brilliant trail through athletics at Maryland, will be presented with a trophy and other gifts by co-eds, who will attend the game as guests of the Washington club.

Scouted by the Cleveland club during his college days, Berger joined the New Orleans Club, Cleveland farm, at the start of the 1933 season and set a fielding record for second basemen in the league before graduating to the Indians this year.

With Cleveland, Berger is recognized as one of the outstanding defensive second basemen in the league and during the club's present Eastern invasion has been the leading batter on the team with an average of slightly more than .350.

Myatt, Ex-Indian, Signed by Giants

Richards, Reserve Catcher, Is Sold to Macks.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 26.—Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants today signed Glenn Myatt, veteran Cleveland catcher, and announced Paul Richards, reserve backstop, had been sold to the Philadelphia Athletics.

Myatt, released unconditionally by Walter Johnson, Cleveland manager, was signed as a free agent, Terry said. The terms of his contract were not disclosed.

The former Cleveland catcher, now 38, has been with the Indians since 1923. He batted .318 in 36 games last year.

Cleveland, May 26 (AP).—Glenn Myatt said today he was "mighty pleased" to have signed with the New York Giants. He said he would leave tonight to join the Giants.

Miller Furniture also jumped back into the running by defeating Rinaldi Coalmen, 6 to 3, behind the two-hit pitching of Joe Porter.

Front Royal's Stars Defeat NRA, 5-3

Boerner Allows Four Hits; Spiegal, of Capital, Touched for 11.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FRONT ROYAL, Va., May 26.—The Front Royal All-Stars broke the winning streak of the NRA nine of Washington here this afternoon, triumphing, 5 to 3.

Larry Boerner, on the mound for the Stars, allowed only four hits, three of them by Everett Russell, while the Stars were collecting 11 off Spiegel.

The locals opened their fireworks in the first inning when Lacy McFall hit a home run. Again in the fifth the locals scored twice on Lyle McFall's single, a walk to Coopy Goodwin and Stevens' hit. Again in the seventh, with the bases loaded, Pinch Hitter Gregory hit a sharp single through the box to score two mates.

Huffman made a sensational diving catch to cut short an NRA rally in the ninth inning.

one, or diving madly to the forecourt for a perfectly executed drop shot. Barney's intense activity finally told on him, when in the third set he practically conceded defeat.

Dooley Mitchell pressed Guy Cheng to three sets also, going bowing to the tune of 8—6, 1—6, 7—5. The Americans gained their only point of the afternoon when they swept through the doubles in straight sets. Markey and McElvenny defeated Khi and Cheng, 7—5 and 6—4.

The Cheng-Mitchell tie-up was marked with a series of surprisng reversals. Dooley appeared well on his way to victory when he led, 5—4, in the opening set and again as he dominated the second at 6—1. But his wonted nonchalance continually kept him in hot water.

Trailing at 1— in the deciding fracas, the curly-haired Georgetowner engineered a thrilling four-game sweep, deadlocking the issue. That was his end, however, for C[illegible]ng just wasn't to be denied. With the stocism that only an Oriental can affect, China's second ranking netman braced and handily ran out the necessary two for the match.

The pennant hopes of Carson Myers' Mount Rainier Grays in the Maryland County League were in the ascendancy folowing the brilliant three-hit pitching feat of Lester Chawneg as the Grays upset the Silver Spring Giants, 5 to 0, on the Wheaton field. The unbeaen Washington clowns staged a hitting rampage of 22 blows to bury North Washington under a 15-5 score; the Mount Rainier A. C. also registered its second league victory by a two-run counter-rally, which enabled the Bellman boys to nose out White Haven in a 15-14 slugfest while Cabin John was trimming the Hornig Jewelers, 8 to 4, at Cabin John.

The scintillating fielding of Earl Bauman, who accepted 17 chances in faultless style, a sensational catch by Charlie Moxely in the in the Grays' game, the consitent hitting of Batista and Jones for the Clowns, Smith and A. Belman for Mount Rainier, and Stottlemyer and Froman for Cabin John, were the highlights of the day's play.

Omaha, Defeated in Withers, Likely to Be Choice in Belmont

Colt Is Seen Unbeatable At Route

Bad Racing Luck Given as One Reason for Saturday Upset.

NEW YORK, May 26.—At no small cost to the betting public, the sixtieth running of the Withers mile seems to have proved that William Woodward's Omaha is far from invincible at distances of a mile or less, whatever his merits over the longer routes.

The strapping son of Gallant Fox, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness and hailed as the new 3-year-old champion, was heavily backed at 1-to-2 for the 1935 Withers, run at Belmont Park yesterday, but wound up decisively beaten by Rosemont, from the Foxcatcher Farms of William Du Pont.

Fastest Time.

Bad racing luck, in part at least, can explain Omaha's defeat, but the fact remains that Rosemont, a 3-year-old bay son of The Porter—Garden Rose, won by a length and a half, going away, in the fastest time of the meeting. The winner, an 8-to-1 shot, was clocked in 1:36 3-5. Omaha was second and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plat Eye was a bang-up third.

Despite his defeat, most horsemen considered the Woodward colt as unbeatable at a route. Barring accidents, he undoubtedly will be a strong favorite for the Belmont Stakes at a mile and a half and for all his other engagements at more than a mile.

Meet to Sykesville.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., May 26.—Following a check-up made by the Playground Athletic League, Sykesville High School was conceded the winner in the annual field and track meet of the Carroll County schools, held Saturday, May 18.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Rockingham Park, May 26.

Dear Al:

Bennings, Inc., will operate from Charles Town starting on Wednesday. This was good news to Clocker Mike, who began brushing up on his mountain music before I finished reading the boss' wire. Yes, we will be doing business at the old West Virginia stand right up to fire-cracker day. After that, I believe, we will move back into New England. Charles Town is a 6-furlong track, you know, which reminds me of a fair story. A little colored boy was riding a mile and sixteenth on one of the smaller tracks. The horses had to pass the judges' stand three times. The second time around the colored boy was out in front and he believed he had won. He began to pull up, but upon hearing the other horses driving up on him, he realized that he must go around again. By virtue of some powerful riding he managed to squeeze his mount home, the winner by a nose. The trainer asked him about the race when he returned to the paddock. "Boss," said the boy, "that ain't going to happen no mo'. No, sir. The next times I goes out there, I'se going to put three beans in ma' mouth and every time I goes by dem judges I'se going to spit one out."

BILL.

First race—Prosecutor gets in this sprint with a mere 98 pounds. This fellow has a nice speed figure, and I expect no mistakes. General Lejeune is in excellent form and may surprise. Air Line to take care of the others.

Second race—On Our Way is the standout of the day. Meets a field that should succumb to his brand of racing. Any price will be a good one. Nervy Nella might be troublesome with light weight. Love Lost for the show end.

Third race—Kowtow seems to be the best here due to a feather in post. Young Johnson will do the riding, and he's in rare form now. Maidwell has worked well and could be an upsetter. Queen Helen for the minor award.

Fourth race—Deliberate carried his excellent form from Maryland to this track and he should scamper home in front of this group. Torita's recent victory was impressive. Two Bob, a winter campaigner, has a fighting chance to be closer.

Fifth race—High Torque has been trying in all sorts of fields, but, so far, has gotten nothing. Gets 15 pounds from Westy's Junior tomorrow and may score. Strait Jacket for the rest.

Sixth race—Lord Tournament is one that gets out in front and sometimes sticks it out long enough to triumph, generally at good odds. This short race seems to fit. Red Badge and Accolade for the other money places.

Seventh race—I'm going to give Four Spot one more chance. This one likes a price and he will get one tomorrow. Moralist and Legender are at tops and will be fighting it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Eighth race—Guiding Light shapes well here, and if Wall rides like he did on Balios yesterday there should be a pay-off. Foreign Lady gets in light. Fair Verbena is going to step down soon if not here.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

LETTERS favoring Section 213 (married persons clause) of the economy act are stressing "woman's place is in the home," "spread employment," "abolish the Government employe monarchy of a certain class" and "enforce the law among the higher salaried groups."

BAKER.

Opponents of the section demand its abolishment on the grounds that it is "class legislation," "it is a blow at the merit system," "unfair," "it pries into the private lives of employes," and "it fosters immorality, causing unmarried couples to live in sin."

We believe a solution to this problem can be obtained through a thorough presentation of both sides. Hence, Federal Diary readers are invited to write on this subject (or on any other subject affecting Federal personnel). For each letter favoring or opposing Section 213 that is published, a pair of tickets to one of the Loew's theaters will be awarded. The letters will be published in pairs—one for and one against the clause. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters must not exceed 250 words.

Here are today's best pair:

Favoring Section 213.

"Dear Mr. Baker:

"I am in favor of retaining this law but I would like to qualify this by adding: Give the law teeth and enforce it equally on all married persons in Government service. Then go further and force industry to adopt the same regulation thereby compelling married women to return to their homes.

"I have two basic reasons for my views. The first is an economic one. Now I do not say that this plan would be a panacea for our financial ills, but it is undoubtedly true that if all married women were removed from public and private industry, certainly there would be more jobs for single women and men.

"Secondly I believe that when a woman marries it is her place to make a home and prepare to rear a family which is the normal outcome of every successful marriage. When both are working there can be no proper home or home atmosphere because a woman's mind is divided between her job and her home and husband. The too often result is incompatibility and the divorce court.

"When I speak of married women I mean those whose husbands are physically able to support them. Exceptions should be made in the case of women whose husbands are physically incapacitated.

"Kindly bear in mind that these are not the views of an 'old fogey' but I am a modern young man, married and the father of three young children. L. R. (F)."

Opposing Section 213.

"Dear Mr. Baker:

"The only possible excuse for Section 213 of the economy act was economy. Most people lose sight of the fact that it did not help economy one bit. In the first place, only 6 per cent of all the Government employes in the United States came under its provisions, and in the second place it could not spread employment since it only applied when there was a reduction of force, therefore those positions when vacated could not be filled by anyone else, "back in the States." Washington is the most costly city in the United States to live in and people "from back home" could not live on one Government salary.

"How forcing a man or woman in one department (where they were not reducing forces) to resign, to keep the job of the other one in a department where they were reducing forces helped the situation is beyond me. The funds from one department's budget are not transferrable to the other one, so where the economy?

"However, since some Congressmen insist the law is a good thing—let us be magnanimous and "put teeth in the law as Congressman Cochran suggests, by making it apply to all three branches of the Government service, which, of course, will include Congressmen! That is fair and equitable, is it not? And make it apply to heads of divisions in the Government service too.

"A taxpayer, a voter, and a Government Clerk (F)."

Members of the Interdepartmental Golf League are looking forward to their annual tournament which will be held in three classes at Indian Springs June 10 and 11. Arrangements are being made to open the golf course at Indian Springs to Govern.nent employes soon.

Congress is working: Summer ends their day
Partings will be said as they journey on their way
They will look forward to pleasures at the close;
Forgetful of promises to many of their foes.

Strange how often the time of the year
Changes their pledges to memories so clear
Government clerks labor and hope in vain,
Awaiting the day of rejoicing again.

With Bonus and NRA and Government leave,
The issues outstanding to cause a pet peeve,
We, who in youth knew naught of old age
Can now retire and leave the stage.

Bones of 200 Chinese To Be Sent Back Home

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 26.—The bones of more than 200 Chinese are being collected from cemeteries in the Eastern States for shipment next week to the burial grounds of their ancestors.

Because of the high cost of shipping bodies to China, said Bert B. Eutemey, president of the Chinese Charitable and Benevolent Association, they are buried here for ten years. Then the sterilized bones are packed in boxes and sent back.

Eutemey said many Chinese who have adopted Christianity still arrange to have their bones returned to their native land.

Eruptions in Iceland.

A LETTER TO A DISCOURAGED GOLFER.

"Seattle.—There may not be such a thing as a world's record golf score, but Hortense Harley, foremost yachtswoman of Seattle, claims one. In her first attempt at the game after a series of lessons, she took an hour and 113 strokes to play two holes. 'When I got to the third tee, and figured it would take 904 more strokes and eight more hours to finish I quit for good,' she said."—News item.

* * * * *

Dear Miss Harley: In the first place, you did not quit golf for good. You only think you did. You will come back for more. Once a person makes the initial mistake of taking a club from a bag and making futile motions with it all is lost. Ask anybody.

* * * *

In the second place, my dear lady, I am surprised that you are so easily discouraged. One hundred and thirteen strokes for two holes is not bad for a beginner; in fact, I would say it was something like 30 under par, all things considered. There are a lot of golfers who have been playing the game for years and who still take 113 for two holes. The difference between them and you, I guess, is that you violate one of the fundamentals of early golf. You count all the strokes.

* * * *

Now, if you are going to be that foolish you will find the game pretty depressing, and it is no wonder you took an hour to play two holes. A beginner who can count all his or her strokes on two holes in an hour is better than an average golfer and away ahead of the average counter. I know many golfers who, if they counted ALL their strokes on even one hole, would take an hour. And they are NOT beginners, either.

* * * *

After the first five or six whacks the custom is to forget arithmetic and think no more about it until one finishes the hole. Then one takes an innocent stance and asks: "What did I take, anyway? I got a 6, didn't I?"

* * * *

You used poor judgment in estimating that it would take 904 more strokes to play the next 16 holes, Miss Harley. I have seen many beginners break 900, and my first time around I got an 889.

* * * *

So get out there again (as, of course, you can't help doing) and keep plugging way. I felt despondent, too, for the first five or ten years as a beginner, but, thanks to lessons from competent professionals and constant practice, I often play 18 holes in 600 or 700 strokes today.*

Yours truly,
ELMER TWITCHELL.

*With preferred lies, I mean.

Little to Rest Month Until Open Play

Reaches London, Receives Many Invitations to Make Visits.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 26.—British amateur champion for the second successive year, his stranglehold on world amateur golf more secure than ever, Lawson Little has returned to London for a month's relaxation before competing in the British Open at Muirfield.

The husky Californian flew down from St. Anne's-on-the-Sea last night with Dan Topping, of Greenwich, Conn., and Harvey Shaffer, of New York as his companions.

The strain of playing eight matches under the utmost pressure for six days before beating tenacious Dr. William Tweddell on the final green in the 36-hole final yesterday left the three-way champion anxious to forget golf for a few days.

Popularity Mounts.

His popularity here has mounted with every victory. He has received dozens of invitations to visit prominent people and he has been urged to play exhibitions on scores of courses from the Isle of Wight to Scotland.

A few of them he will accept later, but for the present he plans to enjoy London's gay jubilee season. He, Topping and Shaffer have made tentative plans to visit St. Andrew's in a few days so the latter pair will have a chance to play that famous course. Wherever he goes in England he'll encounter only acclaim.

British golfing experts weren't so ready to accept him as a great champion after he defeated James Wallace, 14 and 13, in last year's final at Prestwick but they're convinced now.

Likened to Jones.

"When his putter is working he's as great a golfer as Bob Jones or any man who ever lived," was the studied tribute of Fred Robson, veteran British pro.

Surely no champion ever gave a more impressive performance in a pinch than did Little after Tweddell, shooting like an inspired automaton, caught him at the thirtieth hole.

The fighting doctor told the Associated Press later that he knew he was licked when Little, after exploding from a bunker at the thirty-fourth, ran down a 15-foot putt to halve the hole and retain his two-up advantage.

Knew It Was Over.

"When he went in that trap," Tweddell commented, "I said to myself, 'well, well, well, looks like I might win this thing yet.' I contented myself with running my ball dead having no idea Lawson would sink that putt. When he knocked it in I knew it was all over."

In defeat Tweddell was almost as great a hero as Little. England, long accustomed to seeing her amateurs fold up when pitted against America's young "tigers," has taken the Little man with the flaming spirit properly to her heart.

Little's victory was a blow to the bookmakers, big bettors having loaded up on the American at the starting odds of 5 to 1. The largest commission house represented at the course did not have a single bet on Tweddell, who started at 30 to 1.

formed of it on his arrival here from New York.

"I figured Natie to stop Buck in their last bout," McCarney stated. "And he almost did it with body punches in the first five rounds. Then lack of condition caught up with him and he was unable to make the Garrison finish which seems necessary to win a decision here. With the more punishing gloves, Natie undoubtedly would have stopped Everett before the fifth in their first bout. With the lihter gloves this time he figures to stop him in almost any round after the third—and he'll be in condition to keep whaling away until he makes Buck drop."

Both boxers reported in the proverbial pink of condition following their final workouts Saturday afternoon. Brown, who weighed in at 193 for their previous encounter, was down in the 80's and expected to hit between 184 and 186 at the official testing of tonnages this afternoon.

Everett, who may be pointed at the lightweight crown after tonight's bout, has whittled away several more pounds and may enter the ring weighing no more than 180 or 181.

Jimmy Jones, Baltimore welterweight hope, will meet Elmer Bezenah, a knockout artist, in an eight-round semifinal. In six-rounders, Joe Teems will tackle Ernest Torres and Roy Manley has been rematched with Pete Bevans. Kirkwood Burke, District A. A. U. heavyweight champion, will make his professional debut in a four-rounder against one Harry Vestra in a four-round curtain-raiser.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (excellent) to G (the opposite).

MAIN EVENT—Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., vs. Natie Brown, Washington, heavyweights; 10 rounds. Rates B plus. The previous match between these two, won by Everett, was a savage affair from gong to gong which set a new high for local heavyweight action. Everett had a mad on Brown then and he still has it. Brown now also is mad at Everett and it looks as though the referee—whoever he may be—is in for stormy weather. The result is a toss-up, but we'll have to string along with Everett to repeat just because—just because we really don't know what prediction to make and have to pick someone.

SEMIFINAL—Jimmy Jones, Baltimore, vs. Elmer Bezenah, New York, welterweights; 8 rounds. Rated C. Jones has too much class for Elmer, but the latter swings money punches and Jones opens up, so there may be an upset.

Kirkwood Burke, Washington, vs. Harry Vestra, Baltimore, heavyweights; 4 rounds. Rated E. Burke.

"Now there is an event I really didn't think I could win. I was a little bit tired and I am not an experienced hurdler. I broke with the field and we all hit the first hurdle together. I thought to myself, 'These fellows aren't so tough.' Well, we stayed pretty much together until the third hurdle from the tape. I said to myself, 'I might as well get going.' I dug in, and I won."

"That probably was my toughest race of the day. I was afraid of Bob Grieve, the Illinois sprinter."

Jesse stopped abruptly. "I was crazy in the 220," he said.

"I mean I didn't run all the way," he explained. "Why, darn it, I just trotted the first 100. I don't know what got into me, but I was loafing and the field began to pull away from me. Well, I figured I had better get going, and I'll tell you right now I never ran a faster 100 in my life than I did from then on."

head. Heinie Manush's third hit of the day came in the form of his second double and Bluege scored. Buddy Myer brought Manush home with a one-base rap into right.

Thus fortified, Hadley had been pitching a magnificent ball game. Only four hits—all singles—had been the Indians' portion during the first six innings. With two out in the seventh, they averted a shutout with a three-run uprising, inspired by Berger's infield single and a wild pitch that whacked Lee on the leg. A pair of long doubles to center by Knickerbocker and Averill accounted for the three runs.

The Indians picked up another run in the ninth and then saw their fading hopes vanish completely on a sour note. Knickerbocker was picked off first base by Cliff Bolton's snap throw for the game-ending out.
